Test ban treaty set for Friday

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford and Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev will sign a major Soviet-American nuclear test ban treaty Friday, the White House said today.

Such a treaty was scheduled to be signed earlier this month. But administration sources said it was delayed then when Ford's advisers convinced him it would be politicallly damaging for the President to sign a treaty with the Russians just before the crucial Michigan primary.

The signings will take place simultaneously in Washington and Moscow at 10 a.m. EDT.

The treaty bans nuclear explosions above the 150-kiloton level and provides for on-site inspections of tests. Tentative agreement for the accord was reached April 9.

White House and State Department officials have denied that political considerations played a part in delaying signing of the treaty. They contended the signing date never had been fixed and said "technical reasons" caused the signing to be held up.

The treaty parallels an agreement reached in 1974 limiting underground nuclear weapons testing to 150 kilotons — the equivalent of 150 thousands tons of TNT, or 10 times the size of the blast that devasted Hiroshima in 1945.

However, that treaty, considered a milestone in relaxing tensions between the two superpowers, was held back from formal ratification by the Senate until terms could be completed governing peaceful explosions.

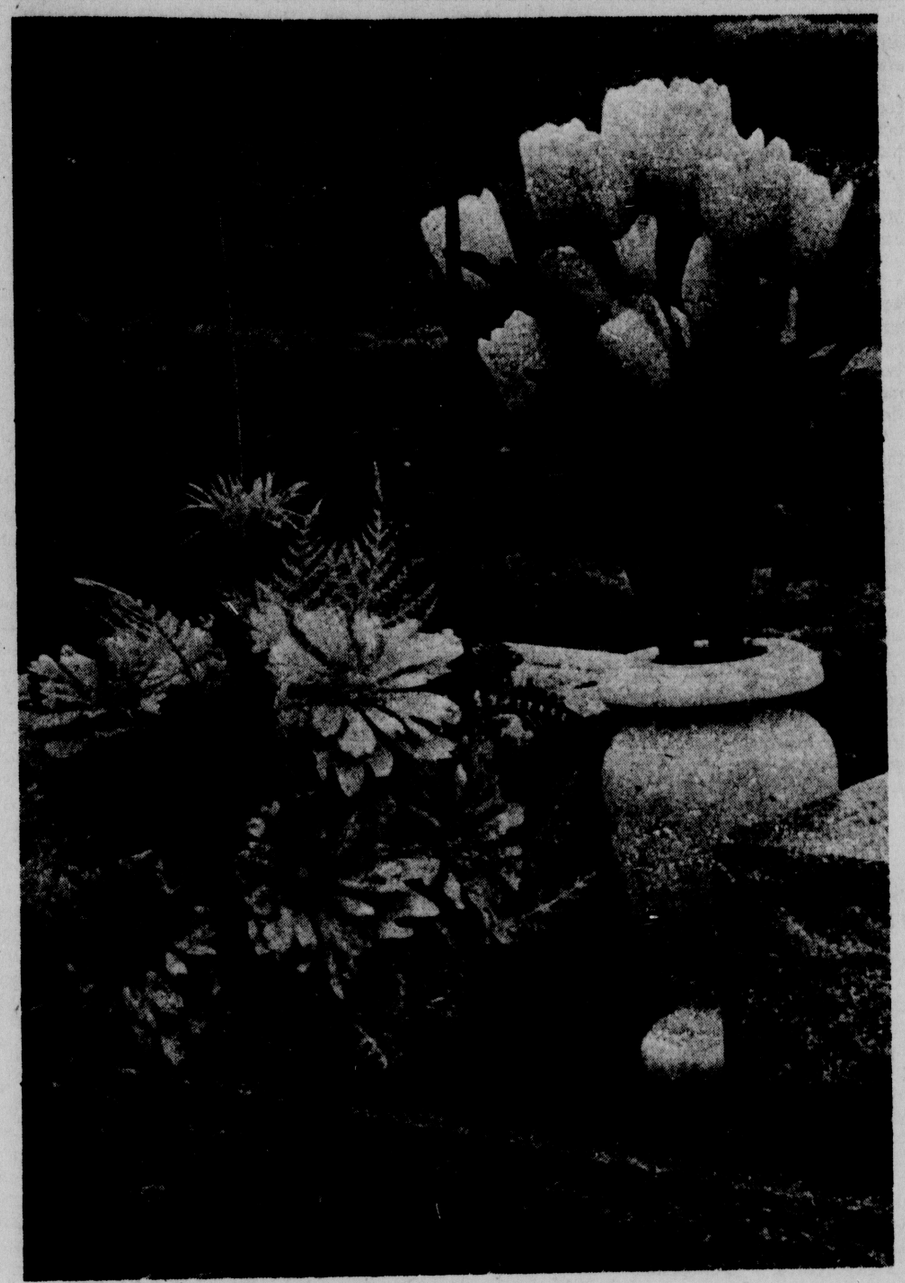

Over the last few years, the United States has lost interest in using nuclear explosions for such peaceful purposes as diverting rivers and excavating for oil and gas. However, the Russians, particulary in Siberia and other inaccessible areas, are understood to still have high hopes for utilizing such explosives.

Meanwhile, the more difficult and controversial negotiations to limit offensive nuclear weapons 1985 have bogged down and remain unresolved.

These SALT talks, in Geneva, are considered the principal barometer of detente policy pursued through the Nixon and Ford administrations. On several occassions, largely through active negotiation by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, the two sides seemed on the verge of a breakthrough but each time the gap was not closed.

In a campaign speech in Los Angeles Tuesday, Ford said that if he gets a good arms agreement with the Russians, he will submit it to Congress "whether it hurts me or helps me in this elections."

Ford's challenger for the GOP nomination, Ronald Reagan, has consistently accused the administration of giving away much to the Soviets in nuclear arms talks and other matters of detente.

Flowers that will stay

Residents will be putting flowers on the graves of friends and relatives this weekend and city officials are asking that care be exercised to prevent the flowers from being scattered by storms and vandals. Devices are available which keep flowers off the ground, secure and in place, city officials say. (Daily Standard photo)

Grant gets life sentence

BENTON — James Grant of Sikeston who was convicted April 16 of first- degree murder in the July 8, 1975 slaying of Mrs. Roberta Johnson in her Sikeston home, was sentenced to life imprisonment in Scott County Circuit Court today by Judge Marshall Craig.

Before pronouncing sentence, Judge Craig denied a motion for new trial submitted by Grant's defense attorney.

Grant displayed no emotion when the sentence was pronounced.

Mrs. Johnson's body was found brutally beaten and stabbed to death in her home by a friend on the morning of July 8. Evidence indicated that the 67-year-old widow had also been sexually assaulted.

$5 million bond issue to go on Sikeston ballot

Sikeston voters soon will be asked to approve a $5 million industrial revenue bond issue to help finance construction of a DeKalb Ag-Research seed corn processing facility on a site south of town, the City Council decided Wednesday.

In other action, the council approved the purchase of six new police cars and awarded a contract for the paving of First and Firsco streets.

Revenue bonds

The council approved a resolution calling for a $5 - million bond issue which will be repaid by the company.

No date was set for the referendum, but City Manager Charles Church said he thought the bond issue would probably be placed on the ballot for the Aug. 3 primary election.

The bond issue would not affect the city's future bonding power, because there is no limit on the amount of revenue bonds which can be issued, Church said.

City Attorney Manuel Drumm said DeKalb had asked a bonding attorney a few months ago if industrial bonds could be issued for a seed processing plant, and the attorney said no. The attorney re-evaluated his position within the past few weeks, however, and the company dediced to ask for the bonds.

The attorney decided that the company does enough to the product that it comes out different than the form it came into the plant, Drumm said.

The plant, to be located just south of town on Highway 61, will contain an office-warehouse building, truck scales, drying bins and storage. Within two years a permanent concrete dryer and a processessing facility will be built.

The plant will employ 10 people on a permanent basis and several hundred on a seasonal basis, according to plant manager Jack Bloemer. More than half the summer season employes will be Sikeston school students.

Police cars

The council decided to purchase six new police cars from Sikeston Motor Co. The old police cars will be sold to Jarvis Motor Co.

The decision was made after a complex series of bids was received. The city asked for bids on the sale price of six new vehicles with no trade-in, six new vehicles with trade-in, and for a cash sale on the old vehicles.

Sikeston Motor Co. bid $25,800 for the new cars, with a trade-in allowance of $7,200 for a total price of $18,600. Jarvis bid $30,818 for the new cars and $11,614 trade-in for a price of $19,203. Jarvis also bid a purchase price of $7,800 if it bought the old cars without selling new cars to the city.

A third bid of $3,886 was offered for the police cars by Danny Bird.

The council decided to accept the Sikeston Motor bid for the new cars and the Jarvis bid for the purchase of the old cars, bringing the cost to the city for the new cars down to $18,000.

Sikeston Motor Co. told the council that delivery on six new Ford torinos could be expected in about one month.

Before the old cars are sold to Jarvis Motor Co., Church said a decision will be made on whether to sell all six or keep the present unmarked car for use by the detective division.

Street contract

The council awarded a contract for the paving of First and Frisco streets to W. S. McMullin Construction Co. for $8 per foot. Bridger Construction had bid $9.50 per foot on the project.

First Street will be paved between Wakefield and Smith streets, and Frisco Street will be paved between Compress Road and North Street.

Oil price may rise by 5-10%

BALI, Indonesia (AP) — Saudi Arabia today opposed any increase in the price of oil for the rest of the year as the oil cartel opened another price-setting meeting. But observers expect an increase of 5 to 10 per cent in the base price.

"We oppose any increase in price, and we have a very strong position on that," Saudi Oil Minister Ahmed Zaki Yamani told newsmen at the opening of a three-day meeting of the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Yamani said OPEC's present base price should be maintained "until the end of the year."

OPEC raised the price Oct. 1 by 10 per cent to $11.51 a barrel and agreed to a price freeze until the end of June as a compromise between Iran's demand for a 15 per cent increase and Saudi opposition to any increase. Iran and Iraq are again pressing for an increase, and oil industry analysts expect the Bali meeting to vote a hike of 5 to 10 per cent.

Such an increase, if passed along to the consumer, could increase the cost of gasoline in the United States one to two cents a gallon.

Hayes trial ends with a hung jury

NEW MADRID— A New Madrid County Circuit Court jury failed to reach a verdict Wednesday in the trial of Jerry James Hayes, 37, of Ste. Genevieve, and Judge William L. Ragland declared a mistrial in the proceedings.

Hayes and his brother, Danny Hayes, 31, of Portageville, are charged separately with burglary and larceny in connection with a break-in on Dec. 29, 1975 at Hickory Village Lounge, Highway 162 East in Portageville and the theft of a safe that reportedly contained $2,700.

The safe was recovered from Bay Ditch southeast of Portageville and checks and cash totaling $2,290.14, apparently overlooked by the burglars, were still inside.

The jury of nine men and three women began deliberations at 2:30 p.m., and, when it appeared at 5 p.m. the members were having problems reaching a decision, Judge Ragland summoned them to the courtroom.

Judge Ragland asked the foreman if any progress was being made, and the foreman said no. The judge then inquired if any member of the jury would like to comment or if they felt they could make a decision if given additional time.

When no response was received from the jury, the judge told them they had deliberated at least two and a half hours and he thought that was long enough, then declared a mistrial.

The case has been reset for July 14.

Prior to the start of the case, Danny Hayes entered a voluntary guilty plea which has been taken under advisement.

The building is owned by Goode's Nursery.

Flowers on graves need to be secured

City officials are asking residents who plan to put flowers on the graves of friends or relatives in the City Cemetery for Memorial Day to take a few steps to ensure that the flowers will remain on the graves.

City Manager Charles Church said vandals and storms often scatter flowers about the cemetery soon after the flowers have been placed on the graves.

Church said devices are available which hold flowers onto the tombstone and which do not require city employes to remove the flowers when mowing. A piece of wire can also be used to keep the flowers secure and off the ground, Church said.

City employes who mow the cemetery say glass jars used as vases are almost always thrown against tombstones by vandals.

Aviation day set

NEW MADRID — The New Madrid County Pilots Association's fourth annual aviation day is scheduled Saturday at the New Madrid County airport near Marston.

Activities planned for the all-day affair include contests for pilots, airplane rides and refreshments.

Aviation day is open to the public. The contests are open to any pilot.

The opening event will be the spot landing competition that begins at 8 a.m. This tests the skill of the pilot to land as near a certain spot on the runway as possible. The closest landing wins the first place trophy. Second and third place trophies will also be awarded.

Another contest is called bomb dropping. The contestants fly two in a plane, one to pilot and one to drop the bomb. The plane flies 50 to 100 feet over the target and the bomber drops a sack of lime, trying to get as close to the designated target as possible.

One trophy will be awarded to the person dropping the bomb nearest the target.

Scenic airplane rides will be offered throughout the day to view the New Madrid and Portageville area. The pilots flying the scenic rides have the equivalency of at least a commercial rating.

For the convenience of the spectators a refreshment stand will be open all day with hot dogs, soft drinks, popcorns and snowcones.

Mrs. Carol Edwards of New Madrid, the only woman member of the county pilots association, will be in charge of the stand and will be assisted by Mrs. Ann Sloan, wife of the association's president, Jim Sloan of New Madrid.

Other officers are Preston Shaw of Portageville, vice president; and Johnny Edwards of New Madrid, secretary-treasurer.

Association member Mike Shaw of Portageville, a local radio announcer, will be the public address announcer.

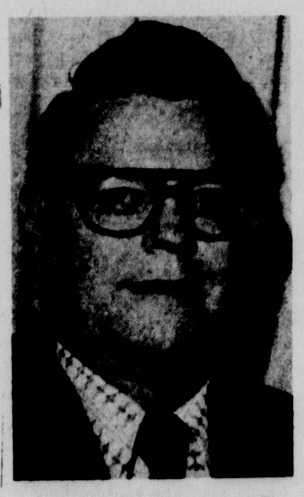

Phillips candidate for State representative

NEW MADRID — W. R. "Dick" Phillips Jr., a lifelong resident of New Madrid, announces his candidacy for nomination on the Democratic ticket for the office of state representative from the 161st District in the Aug. 3 primary election.

Phillips believes he is fully capable of filling the position for which he seeks and says his past record in public service and community progress indicate he possesses the quality and know-how expected of a candidate.

Phillips' public service and accomplishments include a six-year stretch as treasurer of New Madrid County expiring on Dec. 31, 1974. While holding that office, he initiated the practice of investing excess county funds in interest- bearing accounts, thereby earning in excess of $59,000 for the taxpayers during his term in office.

He also represented ward three on the Board of alderman for the city of New Madrid for 12 years. During his terms of alderman he was instrumental in establishment of the 4,400-acre St. Jude Industrial Park, thereby providing facilities available to the huge electric generating plant presently being operated by Associated Electric Cooperative and progressive industrial moves that induced Noranda Aluminum, Inc., to locate in the industrial park, build the necessary plant and furnish employment so badly needed in the community.

Dick Phillips

Phillips was also instrumental in his capacity as alderman in proposing programs for community betterment leading to the surfacing of many streets, overall drainage improvements, the establishment of the lagoon sewage disposal system, along with the new water pumping, treating and storage facilities.

Presently, Phillips is owner and operator of Phillips Fertilizer Co. in New Madrid, is a partner in the Young & Phillips farm operation; and was employed with the A. C. Riley Cotton Co. for about 25 years. He has served as a community committeeman for the local Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service office about five years; and, from 1961 through 1969, was a member of the ASC County Committee, having served as chairman the last six years.

Phillips is a former member of the board of directors of the New Madrid Chamber of Commerce, and served a term as vice president of the Missouri Association of Farmer Elected ASC Committeemen.

Phillips is a graduate of Chaminade High School in St. Louis, attended Georgia Tech, as well as University of Missouri, where he studied accounting.

He is a veteran, having served in the Navy during World War II.

He is married to the former Marjorie McSpadden, and they are the parents of three children. Kathy, a daughter is married; a second daughter, Cindi, is a student in college, while a son, Richard III, is associated with his father in the fertilizer business.

Phillips feels his experience in both agricultural and city management problems, along with county problems well qualifies him to serve as state Representative, and says the voters of New Madrid County will find that he will represent their interests, above all others, for betterment and improvement of the entire county and state.

Before pronouncing sentence, Judge Craig denied a motion for new trial submitted by Grant's defense attorney.

$5 million bond issue to go on Sikeston ballot

Sikeston voters soon will be asked to approve a $5 million industrial revenue bond issue to help finance construction of a DeKalb Ag-Research seed corn processing facility on a site south of town, the City Council decided Wednesday.

In other action, the council approved the purchase of six new police cars and awarded a contract for the paving of First and Firsco streets.

Revenue bonds

The council approved a resolution calling for a $5 - million bond issue which will be repaid by the company.

No date was set for the referendum, but City Manager Charles Church said he thought the bond issue would probably be placed on the ballot for the Aug. 3 primary election.

The bond issue would not affect the city's future bonding power, because there is no limit on the amount of revenue bonds which can be issued, Church said.

City Attorney Manuel Drumm said DeKalb had asked a bonding attorney a few months ago if industrial bonds could be issued for a seed processing plant, and the attorney said no. The attorney re-evaluated his position within the past few weeks, however, and the company dediced to ask for the bonds.

The attorney decided that the company does enough to the product that it comes out different than the form it came into the plant, Drumm said.

The plant, to be located just south of town on Highway 61, will contain an office-warehouse building, truck scales, drying bins and storage. Within two years a permanent concrete dryer and a processessing facility will be built.

The plant will employ 10 people on a permanent basis and several hundred on a seasonal basis, according to plant manager Jack Bloemer. More than half the summer season employes will be Sikeston school students.

Police cars

The council decided to purchase six new police cars from Sikeston Motor Co. The old police cars will be sold to Jarvis Motor Co.

The decision was made after a complex series of bids was received. The city asked for bids on the sale price of six new vehicles with no trade-in, six new vehicles with trade-in, and for a cash sale on the old vehicles.

Sikeston Motor Co. bid $25,800 for the new cars, with a trade-in allowance of $7,200 for a total price of $18,600. Jarvis bid $30,818 for the new cars and $11,614 trade-in for a price of $19,203. Jarvis also bid a purchase price of $7,800 if it bought the old cars without selling new cars to the city.

A third bid of $3,886 was offered for the police cars by Danny Bird.

The council decided to accept the Sikeston Motor bid for the new cars and the Jarvis bid for the purchase of the old cars, bringing the cost to the city for the new cars down to $18,000.

Sikeston Motor Co. told the council that delivery on six new Ford torinos could be expected in about one month.

Before the old cars are sold to Jarvis Motor Co., Church said a decision will be made on whether to sell all six or keep the present unmarked car for use by the detective division.

Street contract

The council awarded a contract for the paving of First and Frisco streets to W. S. McMullin Construction Co. for $8 per foot. Bridger Construction had bid $9.50 per foot on the project.

First Street will be paved between Wakefield and Smith streets, and Frisco Street will be paved between Compress Road and North Street.

Oil price may rise by 5-10%

BALI, Indonesia (AP) — Saudi Arabia today opposed any increase in the price of oil for the rest of the year as the oil cartel opened another price-setting meeting. But observers expect an increase of 5 to 10 per cent in the base price.

"We oppose any increase in price, and we have a very strong position on that," Saudi Oil Minister Ahmed Zaki Yamani told newsmen at the opening of a three-day meeting of the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Yamani said OPEC's present base price should be maintained "until the end of the year."

OPEC raised the price Oct. 1 by 10 per cent to $11.51 a barrel and agreed to a price freeze until the end of June as a compromise between Iran's demand for a 15 per cent increase and Saudi opposition to any increase. Iran and Iraq are again pressing for an increase, and oil industry analysts expect the Bali meeting to vote a hike of 5 to 10 per cent.

Such an increase, if passed along to the consumer, could increase the cost of gasoline in the United States one to two cents a gallon.

Hayes trial ends with a hung jury

NEW MADRID— A New Madrid County Circuit Court jury failed to reach a verdict Wednesday in the trial of Jerry James Hayes, 37, of Ste. Genevieve, and Judge William L. Ragland declared a mistrial in the proceedings.

Hayes and his brother, Danny Hayes, 31, of Portageville, are charged separately with burglary and larceny in connection with a break-in on Dec. 29, 1975 at Hickory Village Lounge, Highway 162 East in Portageville and the theft of a safe that reportedly contained $2,700.

The safe was recovered from Bay Ditch southeast of Portageville and checks and cash totaling $2,290.14, apparently overlooked by the burglars, were still inside.

The jury of nine men and three women began deliberations at 2:30 p.m., and, when it appeared at 5 p.m. the members were having problems reaching a decision, Judge Ragland summoned them to the courtroom.

Judge Ragland asked the foreman if any progress was being made, and the foreman said no. The judge then inquired if any member of the jury would like to comment or if they felt they could make a decision if given additional time.

When no response was received from the jury, the judge told them they had deliberated at least two and a half hours and he thought that was long enough, then declared a mistrial.

The case has been reset for July 14.

Prior to the start of the case, Danny Hayes entered a voluntary guilty plea which has been taken under advisement.

Activities planned for the all-day affair include contests for pilots, airplane rides and refreshments.

Aviation day is open to the public. The contests are open to any pilot.

Another contest is called bomb dropping. The contestants fly two in a plane, one to pilot and one to drop the bomb. The plane flies 50 to 100 feet over the target and the bomber drops a sack of lime, trying to get as close to the designated target as possible.

One trophy will be awarded to the person dropping the bomb nearest the target.

Scenic airplane rides will be offered throughout the day to view the New Madrid and Portageville area. The pilots flying the scenic rides have the equivalency of at least a commercial rating.

Equipment reported stolen

A posthole digger and three boxes of coulter frames have been reported stolen from Aufdenberg Equipment Co., 130 S. Kingshighway, according to police.

Jerry Aufdenberg, owner of the company, told police the items were discovered missing May 5, but that he waited until an inventory was completed before filing a report.

The posthole digger was valued at $296 and the three boxes of frames at $150.

Arson suspected in local fire

Arson is suspected in a fire which did minor damage to a vacant house at 224 Watson St. about 9:25 p.m. Wednesday.

The fire broke out in a closet in the southeast portion of the home, but was extinguished by firemen before causing much damage.

Police said a one- gallon can of paint thinner and cigarette butts and matches were found in the room.

The building is owned by Goode's Nursery.

Flowers on graves need to be secured

City officials are asking residents who plan to put flowers on the graves of friends or relatives in the City Cemetery for Memorial Day to take a few steps to ensure that the flowers will remain on the graves.

City Manager Charles Church said vandals and storms often scatter flowers about the cemetery soon after the flowers have been placed on the graves.

Church said devices are available which hold flowers onto the tombstone and which do not require city employes to remove the flowers when mowing. A piece of wire can also be used to keep the flowers secure and off the ground, Church said.

Phillips candidate for State representative

NEW MADRID — W. R. "Dick" Phillips Jr., a lifelong resident of New Madrid, announces his candidacy for nomination on the Democratic ticket for the office of state representative from the 161st District in the Aug. 3 primary election.

Phillips believes he is fully capable of filling the position for which he seeks and says his past record in public service and community progress indicate he possesses the quality and know-how expected of a candidate.

Phillips' public service and accomplishments include a six-year stretch as treasurer of New Madrid County expiring on Dec. 31, 1974. While holding that office, he initiated the practice of investing excess county funds in interest- bearing accounts, thereby earning in excess of $59,000 for the taxpayers during his term in office.

He also represented ward three on the Board of alderman for the city of New Madrid for 12 years. During his terms of alderman he was instrumental in establishment of the 4,400-acre St. Jude Industrial Park, thereby providing facilities available to the huge electric generating plant presently being operated by Associated Electric Cooperative and progressive industrial moves that induced Noranda Aluminum, Inc., to locate in the industrial park, build the necessary plant and furnish employment so badly needed in the community.

Dick Phillips

Phillips was also instrumental in his capacity as alderman in proposing programs for community betterment leading to the surfacing of many streets, overall drainage improvements, the establishment of the lagoon sewage disposal system, along with the new water pumping, treating and storage facilities.

Presently, Phillips is owner and operator of Phillips Fertilizer Co. in New Madrid, is a partner in the Young & Phillips farm operation; and was employed with the A. C. Riley Cotton Co. for about 25 years. He has served as a community committeeman for the local Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service office about five years; and, from 1961 through 1969, was a member of the ASC County Committee, having served as chairman the last six years.

Phillips is a former member of the board of directors of the New Madrid Chamber of Commerce, and served a term as vice president of the Missouri Association of Farmer Elected ASC Committeemen.

Phillips is a graduate of Chaminade High School in St. Louis, attended Georgia Tech, as well as University of Missouri, where he studied accounting.

He is a veteran, having served in the Navy during World War II.

He is married to the former Marjorie McSpadden, and they are the parents of three children. Kathy, a daughter is married; a second daughter, Cindi, is a student in college, while a son, Richard III, is associated with his father in the fertilizer business.

Phillips feels his experience in both agricultural and city management problems, along with county problems well qualifies him to serve as state Representative, and says the voters of New Madrid County will find that he will represent their interests, above all others, for betterment and improvement of the entire county and state.

IT WARRANTS IMITATION

The "no'fault" concept has spread from automobile insurance to divorce and now to consumer products. At least one company has tried it, anyway, and reports that it works.

Most companies guarantee their products with offers to repair or replace components that fail within a certain period of time. Three years ago, the Gast Manufacturing Corp. of Benton Harbor, Mich., introduced a Novel "no-fault" warranty covering its air compressors, vacuum pumps and air motors for any reason — even deliberate abuse or neglect by the customer.

The company has discovered that while its warranty repair costs have been slightly higher, these have been more than offset by the elimination of lengthy correspondence and report writing by its service department.

"In addition," says Herman Robandt, Gast's director of marketing and sales, "our customers have never been more satisifed. Their buyers don't have to haggle with sales and service departments, trying to establish who's at fault when abuse or neglect are involved."

In the few cases where failure has occurred because of abuse or neglect, the customer receives a letter notifying him that his unit has been repaired at no charge. The letter also outlines the reason for the failure and points out that if the same unit is goofed up again, a charge will probably be made.

That seems fair enough. Every customer should be given one chance. The no-fault warranty sounds like an idea that deserves to be copied.

Is there a monopoly in the petroleum industry?

Here are some facts from the Chamber of Commerce of the U.S. which were prepared for its membership.

--There are over 10,000 companies competing in oil and gas exploration and production.

--There are more than 130 refining companies, and none has more than 9 per cent of the production capacity. The top four add up to 32 per cent.

--There are 15,000 wholesalers of petroleum products and 300,000 retailers.

--More than 50 companies are engaged in production, refining and marketing.

--Independent companies have increased their gasoline sales dramatically from 19 per cent of the market in 1967 to 31 per cent in early 1975.

--Oil company profits average less than two cents a gallon on gasoline, compared with a federal tax of four cents and an average 7.7 cents for state taxes.

BREAD AND GASOLINE

Soviet tractors are now being distributed to American farmers through U.S. farm equipment dealers, according to an Associated Press dispatch. This means that essential food and fiber production will depend in part upon utilization of Russian tractors. If the trend continues, the United States will be in the uncomfortable position of depending upon foreign imports of machinery to maintain food production. Moreover, the foreign machinery will very likely be dependent upon foreign oil imports for fuel.

Many reasons and excuses will be given for faltering American production and competitive ability. In the case of the Russian tractors, one U.S. farmer who now owns a Soviet machine says, "....An American tractor like this one would cost you about $7,000; their price is $5,600. And when you buy an American tractor, you go on a six-month waiting list...." After all the excuses and explanations, the fact remains that this country is leaning more and more on foreign productivity for its existence. Behind the rationalizations for what is happening lies the cold fact that many years of derogatory, punitive and even cynical antibusiness policies and attitudes in America are taking their toll.

Lack of fundamental support of the American business system has left the way wide open for its detractors to undermine it in legislative halls, in political campaigning, in educational institutions and at public forums of all kinds. The country is reaching the point where its bread and gasoline are now furnished through the courtesy of foreigners. Americans should begin asking themselves why this is happening.

TOO LENIENT COURTS MOCK LAW ENFORCEMENT

Life imitates art, they say, and that caper dubbed "The Sting" pulled off the other day by Washington D.C. police and FBI agents was, indeed, like something out of the movies.

During a five-month investigation, undercover agents posing as out-of-town syndicate members and operating out of an abandoned warehouse bought more than 3,500 pieces of stolen property from various denizens of the criminal world—the fruit of countless muggings, breakins, hijackings and auto thefts.

The goods, estimated to be worth more than $2.4 million, included television sets, kitchen appliances, automobiles, credit cards, government checks and equipment and even an electyrocardiagram machine stolen piece by piece from Prince George's County Hospital.

To celebrate the enterprise's success and to show their appreciation, the phony fences threw a party to which they invited all their friends. Then came "the sting"—the arrest of 108 persons and issuing of warrants for 75 more. It was the biggest such roundup in FBI and District of Columbia history.

Unfortunately, however, life has a way of stopping short of art. Or maybe it's the other way around. In movies or on television, the cracking of a case is usually the end of the story and the viewer is left with the satisfying knowledge that justice has triumphed and the evil-doers will receive their appropriate desserts at the hands of the courts.

Of the 108 arrested at the party, 70 had previously been arrested and charged with similar crimes—some of them repeatedly—and 21 were out on parole following convictions. One man had been arrested at least six times for burglary, forgery and other crimes, and in each instance had been released without bail.

In keeping with this sorry pattern, federal magistrates immediately released several of those seized in the haul on their own recognizance.

Claiming that 600 persons indicted on felony charges in Washington are now fugitives, assistant U.S. attorney Charles Roistacher complained bitterly that "most crimes are by people out on bail. The majority of those arrested (at the party) were hard-core criminals. People who commit crimes while out on parole or probation are making a mockery of the system. They are thumbing their noses at the courts."

But lest anyone think this is a problem involving only your ordinary street mugger or burglar or thief, consider the case of the "great grain ripoff" which was coming to a conclusion in New Orleans about the same time as the Washington affair.

Charged on 36 counts of conspiring to steal some $1.7 million worth of grain over a four-year period, two large export companies—Garnac Grain, Inc., and Archer-Daniels-Midland Co.—pleaded "no contest" in U.S. District Court and were fined $10,000 each.

This was not even a slap on the wrist. It was more like a gently stroking with a feather. The costs of the two-year investigation no doubt were far more than the puny $20,000 in fines.

When a felon is sent back onto the street to resume plying his trade even before the arresting officer has completed his paperwork, or corporate criminals are given minuscule fines representing the merest fraction of the illegal profits, something is seriously wrong with our system of justice.

One of these days law enforcement officials, who work hard months or years on an investigation or who daily risk their lives to protect society, are going to stop and ask themselves: "Why bother?"

CANDIDATES WILD ABOUT HARRY

"I tell you, Al" he said, addressing his good friend, Albatross Ives, "I don't understand politics anymore. It used to be that the presidential nomination was a closed corporation with everybody standing on the outside yelling to get in. As soon as they opened up to the public, people lost interest.

"It seems that more people don't care about who's going to be our next president than do. Look at Nebraska last week. Jimmy Carter's unstoppable juggernaut gets beaten by Frank Church, for crying out loud. Three quarters of the people in Nebraska think Frank Church is a new religious sect. What kind of juggernaut gets stopped by that?"

"I know what you mean, Sam. The apathy has reached a frenzied pitch. There's only one really popular politician left."

"Who's that?"

"Harry Truman. All the candidates invoke his name whenever they see something that looks like a voter. Jimmy Carter says Truman is proof that a president doesn't have to lie. Jerry Ford gets choked up at the very mention of his name. That new fellow, Jerry Brown, says he wants to be just like Truman when he grows up."

"What about Hubert Humphrey?"

"He thinks he is Harry Truman. The only guy who doesn't want to be like Harry Truman is Ronald Reagan."

"If I had my imitation of Teddy Roosevelt down as well as he has, I wouldn't want to be Harry Truman either."

"It's funny the way these things go in cycles. I remember when all the candidates wanted to be like Franklin Delano Roosevelt. Politicians love to copy a winner."

"You're right, Sam. He never really had a vogue. Too hard, I think. He had a combination of strength, authority and befuddlement that couldn't be copied. Kennedy, John Kennedy was the last politician everybody wanted to be like."

"Yeah. Even Nixon wanted to be like him. Remember that picture of him, wading in the ocean on that lonely beach, just like Kennedy—except that Nixon had forgotten to take off his shoes."

"Who says he forgot?"

"Do you think politicians will ever want to be like him? He wasn't any more unpopular than Truman was in his day, you know."

"I think it depends on how big the parolee vote gets."

"How do you account for Truman's comeback?"

"It's a combination of things, Sam. It's a kind of nostalgia for a simpler time when we thought we knew what was right and who our friends were. Mainly, though, it's Truman's outspokenness. After the Nixon-Johnson years, the people are yearning for politicians who tell it like it is."

"Boy, I sure don't feel that way."

"You don't? Why?"

"Al, I have heard Ronald Reagan talk about the Panama Canal and I have listened to Jerry Ford explain Locks and Dam 26. I have been to the mountaintop with Jimmy Carter, to the Land of Oz with Jerry Brown and been there when Scoop Jackson talked tough to the Russians—and practically everybody else, for that matter.

"I was in the room when Hubert Humphrey announced it was past his bedtime. I have been sent a message by George Wallace. I have also heard Morris Udall and Fred Harris tell jokes. Al, the American people have one chance and one chance only in this election."

"What's that?"

"That those guys are all liars. Because if they really believe that stuff they keep saying, we're in deep trouble."

'WHO STOLE THE MOMENTUM?'

WASHINGTON — President Ford was going through his closet the other day. Mrs. Ford said, "Gerry, what on earth are you looking for?"

"My momentum. I saw it here last month, but it seems to be gone. You didn't send it out to the cleaners, did you?"

"I haven't touched it," Mrs. Ford said. "I'll check with the household staff."

Mrs. Ford went down to the White House kitchen where all the help were eating lunch. "Have any of you seen the President's momentum? It seems to have been misplaced."

The staff all shook their heads. The upstairs maid said, "No, ma'am. You told us never to touch the President's momentum -- or his football helmet."

Mrs. Ford went back upstairs. "The staff says they haven't seen it. Are you sure you didn't loan it to anybody?"

The president thought hard. "I don't think so. I'll call Kissinger. Maybe he knows where I put it ... Henry, this is the President. I hate to bother you with this, but you didn't take my momentum, did you? ... No, I'm not accusing you of anything ... Henry, I believe in you, I trust you ... Henry, will you stop shouting? ... Yes, it's gone ... Why did I call you?... Well, I just thought you might have picked it up by mistake because you thought it was yours ... What do you mean you've lost your momentum, too? ... Where did you lose yours? Either at Helsinki or the Panama Canal?...

"This is very strange. Somebody is going around stealing our momentums. I better get the FBI on this ...

"Get me Clarence Kelley.... Clarence, this is the President. I seem to have a problem ... Someone has stolen my momentum for the presidential primaries ... It was all wrapped up in a nice box with a big ribbon on it, and now it's gone ... Betty and I have looked everywhere for it ... Could you send over some agents right away?'"

A few hours later.

"Mr. President, we're from the FBI. We understand your momentum was stolen from you."

"Either stolen or lost."

"Who had access to it?"

"Let's see, there was Betty, the children, David Kennerly, Bo Callaway, Rogers Morton and my entire campaign staff."

"That's quite a few people. Do you have any reason to suspect any of them of wanting to take it away from you?"

"No, I don't. It only had sentimental value."

"Think hard, Mr. President. Did you take the momentum with you on any of your trips?"

"Let me see, I believe I took it to Texas with me when I was campaigning there."

"And that was the last time you saw it?"

"As a matter of fact, yes."

"Did you see any suspicious people hanging around who might have taken the momentum when you weren't looking?"

"Well, there was this old movie star who kept fondling it all the time. Betty, what was the name of the old movie actor with the dyed red hair – you know, the one who played 'the Gipper' in 'Knute Rockne'?"

"Ronald Reagan."

"That's the one. I gave him a pair of White House cuff links and a tie clasp, but he jokingly said he'd rather have the momentum instead. You don't think the old guy took it, do you?"

"It's a possibility. The real problem, Mr. President, is there is no law against anyone stealing somebody else's momentum. It's not nice, but it's not a crime."

"Well, then, how do I get it returned?"

"If I were you, I'd steal it back from Reagan in California."

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Jack Anderson

JACK ANDERSON SAYS:
Modern-Day Dreyfus?
with LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON— The Army slipped a military promotion list past President Ford last year without telling him it was engineered by cantankerous old Sen. Strom Thurmond, R.-S.C., as part of a personal vendetta.

The unwitting Ford let the dubious document go through even though three days earlier he had signed a legitimate promotion list and had ordered it sent to the Senate.

There is evidence that the President was the victim of some sleight-of-hand, involving fancy razor-blade work by the Army on presidential documents and an erased date on the promotion papers. Indeed, White House records may actually have been faked.

The Defense Department began an investigation of the bizarre case only to have it quietly quashed, say our sources. The Justice Department also started an investigation that has gotten nowhere.

Thurmond has a strong whip hand over both the Army and Justice, it's worth noting, as a power on the Senate committees that oversee the two departments.

The events that led to the document tampering began as an exercise in Pentagon politics. A brilliant young lieutenant colonel, Wilfred Ebel, became a leading contender to head the 100,000-strong Reserve Officers Association.

Stern old Strom, a past president of the association, looked upon it as his private preserve. He fully intended to install his own protege, a lackluster World War II crony, Maj. Gen. Milmnor Roberts, as the new president.

But the 44-year-old Ebel had an awesome record, complete with medals and citations for "tremendous service" and "personal integrity." His name was also one of the 405 on a promotion list that had been drawn up by the Army's most respected officers. It had been approved by the Pentagon and, on Jan. 14, 1975, had been signed by President Ford. A Pentagon memo adds that Ford had "forwarded (it) to the Senate on 15 January 1975."

But a funny thing happened to Ebel's name on the way from the President's desk to Capitol Hill.

First, Ebel's rivals in the reserves, Thurmond and Roberts, got together for a little chat. Thurmond forthwith directed an aide to call the Army and request, as a classified Army document attests, that Ebel's "nomination ... be held in abeyance."

The Thurmond aide, according to the document, made allegations of misconduct against Ebel. But the document adds, significantly, that it appeared Roberts "may have been the source" of the rumor mongering.

Although the President already had signed Ebel's promotion and had readied it for the Senate, the Army's irrepressible political boss, then-Secretary Howard "Bo" Callaway, suddenly tried to recall Ebel's nomination.

It appeared that Callaway was too late, that the nomination was out of his hands. Nevertheless, he had his special assistant, Col. Peter Kempf, write to the White House asking that Ebel's name be stricken.

Nowhere in this memo, which we have obtained from White House sources, does Callaway's office warn the President that the vengeful Strom was behind the eleventh-hour move.

Instead, Callaway simply sent Ford a new promotion list. Incredibly, Ebel's name had been cut out with a razor blade. Then the sheet had been Xeroxed to make it look like Ebel's name had never been on the list at all.

The razor-blade artistry arounsed the suspicion of Army Adjutant General Verne Bowers, who questioned the action. According to classified testimony taken by the Army inspector general, "General Bowers expressed some reservations about removing the name from the promotion list. He wanted to make sure it was the Secretary of the Army that was directing this and not someone using his name."

Bowers withdrew his objections only after verifying that the orders had been issued by Callaway personally. The new list was then sent to the White House, which forwarded it to the Senate. But our investigation has raised still other questions about the case, with Watergate overtones.

For instance, the documents sent to the Senate are highly unorthodox. The final page of the new list is fine bond paper, with Gerald Ford's signature. But the sheets on top, one of which contains the Xerox sheet with Ebel's name razored out, are all Xerox paper. No other Army nomination papers are this mix of good bond and crude paper.

The possibility that Ford never actually signed the final promotion list but that his signature was simply attached to it is heightened by the fact that the bond-paper nominations are prepared in St. Louis on a special typewriter. It is difficult to see how a new last page cound have been typed up in three days in St. Louis and sent to the White House.

If the last page had been prepared in St. Louis, why weren't the other pages also typed up, too? What appears to have happened, despite White Houe denials, is that the final page from the first list was used and the new list, excluding Ebel's name, was stapled on top. This would mean, according to Ebel's lawyer, former Pentagon Assistant General Counsel Frank Bartimo, that Ford never actually signed a list without Ebel's name on it.

Military spokesmen deny they quashed an investigation of the case. But they admit that Thurmond intervened with Callaway and that Callaway pulled back the list after the President signed it. This, claims the Army, is perfectly legal. But the case has certain parallels to the famed Dreyfus tragedy, in which a young captain was driven from the French army.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Clouds Over Manhattan:
Labor Chief Says 'Chaos' May Hit Democrats' Convention City if Pay Raises Forbidden

NEW YORK -- Though the script still is unfinished, there's an off-off Broadway drama being played out here amid verbal thunder-works which is being watched with hypnotized political horrow by some Democratic National Committee leaders.

No fiction, this. All real life. And in the end this mammoth city, either during or after the nominating convention, may well be in "chaos.'" It may be struck by the nation's biggest municipal employes local union. Its leader, Victor Gotbaum, who speaks for 125,000 members and followers, is saying that he expects solidarity and support on the line from the many other powerful unions, whose contracts also expire at 12:01 a.m. July 1.

"We are fortunate that the July 1 deadline involves many unions -- transport workers, sanitation men, teamsters, police, fire, communications workers, and others," says Gotbaum, the leader of District Council 37, American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employes (AFSCME).

"We will be asking the other civil service unions to join in our determined stand to protect our members and the process of collective bargaining...Attention must now be paid to the needs of the workers we represent, who are suffering terribly from inflation. If this is not done, then it will be the irresponsible forces of management that will bring about the chaos."

Characteristically Gotbaum speaks as a militant labor chief does. He places the responsibility on management -- which in this drama consists of the governor, Hugh Carey, the mayor, Abe Beame, and an Emergency Financial Control Board (EFCB) appinted by them to cut the fat out of the $13.4 billion in the Big Apple's annual budget.

They are all Democrats. So the issue is fraternal, perhaps politically fratricidal. Thus it will be judged by the nation. The final act will come this July during the moment of one of the greatest concentrations of print and electronic media in recent histroy.

Thus the issue will be labor's right to strike an entire municipality. And labor's willingness to do so even if it's their own party in power. This could well become one of the national issues in the presidential campaign.

In this scenario the two central figures are former Army men. Don't underestimate either. The first out front – big, six-foot-two, softespoken even during the scatalogical denunciations, is 54-year-old Vic Gotbaum. He's the essence of today's militant trade unionism. He's all guts. He may be all wrong in his strategy but he'll hit the city's no-spend line as he hit Normandy Beach D-Day plus two weeks as a machine gunner.

To him the restless, ethnically mixed union of civil service workers comes first. His party next. He says he's not bargaining for the Democratic party, though he's a Mo Udall degegate. he certainly is bargaining for his behemoth union, the biggest chunk of membership in the swiftest growing public sector international labor union, AFSCME, headed by Jerry Wurf, now planning its 22nd biennial convention.

When Gotbaum goes radical, he's programmed, so he could paralyze the city. And he says if such "chaos" develops it will be the fault of the mayor, the governor and the Emergency Financial Control Board.

No script now should predict what could happen. I'm told the police won't go in for job action -- maybe. But the huge city could stand still.

To sum it up, when referring to the decision of the financial control board to reject any wage-fringe increases unless accompanied by increased civil service productivity to match and even up costs, Gotbaum snapped, "I don't give a damn about their policy. Did you ever hear of the strike?"

If by July 1 there is no fully approved renewed contract covering the 125,000 city employes in 350 job classifications, then there will be a strike situation, according to Gotbaum, who blames the board.

All of which leads to the second star player in this Gotterdammerung -- the 46-year-old Secretary of the Treasury William Simon, and old Army man himself. As Simon sees it, Gotbaum in no way can get what he wants – namely an income increase for the city employes in any fashion.

Simon rejects the theory of escalating wages based on increased productivity. There's got to be a cut in municipal expenses, not just the equalization of escalating costs. There's just no fat to cut, Simon says. So there can't be any wage-fringe increases if the city is to save itself.

"Point is, will the city have the money to repay the total loan ($2.3 billion)?" Simon asked me rhetorically. "I' ll review the matter in the next month in view of the wholesale strike threats. These increased wage-fringe costs may make repayment of the city's federal debt impossible."

Simon and his colleagues say that Mayor Abe Beame, more harassed than Joshua after 39 years of waiting, wants the federal government "to take the big Apple on faith."

Well, it may or may not happen. There's $1.1 billion of the peoples' money at stake in the July loan alone. The issue is simple.Gotbaum, who municipal employe unions in cities from San Diego east are watching, plans to smash the tough national mayoralty-no-more-money policies.Says Gotbaum, "The (Democratic) convention has no affect on me. I never gave anyone any promises."

Obviously something new has been added to national politics.

The "no'fault" concept has spread from automobile insurance to divorce and now to consumer products. At least one company has tried it, anyway, and reports that it works.

Most companies guarantee their products with offers to repair or replace components that fail within a certain period of time. Three years ago, the Gast Manufacturing Corp. of Benton Harbor, Mich., introduced a Novel "no-fault" warranty covering its air compressors, vacuum pumps and air motors for any reason — even deliberate abuse or neglect by the customer.

The company has discovered that while its warranty repair costs have been slightly higher, these have been more than offset by the elimination of lengthy correspondence and report writing by its service department.

"In addition," says Herman Robandt, Gast's director of marketing and sales, "our customers have never been more satisifed. Their buyers don't have to haggle with sales and service departments, trying to establish who's at fault when abuse or neglect are involved."

In the few cases where failure has occurred because of abuse or neglect, the customer receives a letter notifying him that his unit has been repaired at no charge. The letter also outlines the reason for the failure and points out that if the same unit is goofed up again, a charge will probably be made.

That seems fair enough. Every customer should be given one chance. The no-fault warranty sounds like an idea that deserves to be copied.

Is there a monopoly in the petroleum industry?

Here are some facts from the Chamber of Commerce of the U.S. which were prepared for its membership.

--There are over 10,000 companies competing in oil and gas exploration and production.

--There are more than 130 refining companies, and none has more than 9 per cent of the production capacity. The top four add up to 32 per cent.

--There are 15,000 wholesalers of petroleum products and 300,000 retailers.

--More than 50 companies are engaged in production, refining and marketing.

--Independent companies have increased their gasoline sales dramatically from 19 per cent of the market in 1967 to 31 per cent in early 1975.

--Oil company profits average less than two cents a gallon on gasoline, compared with a federal tax of four cents and an average 7.7 cents for state taxes.

BREAD AND GASOLINE

Soviet tractors are now being distributed to American farmers through U.S. farm equipment dealers, according to an Associated Press dispatch. This means that essential food and fiber production will depend in part upon utilization of Russian tractors. If the trend continues, the United States will be in the uncomfortable position of depending upon foreign imports of machinery to maintain food production. Moreover, the foreign machinery will very likely be dependent upon foreign oil imports for fuel.

Many reasons and excuses will be given for faltering American production and competitive ability. In the case of the Russian tractors, one U.S. farmer who now owns a Soviet machine says, "....An American tractor like this one would cost you about $7,000; their price is $5,600. And when you buy an American tractor, you go on a six-month waiting list...." After all the excuses and explanations, the fact remains that this country is leaning more and more on foreign productivity for its existence. Behind the rationalizations for what is happening lies the cold fact that many years of derogatory, punitive and even cynical antibusiness policies and attitudes in America are taking their toll.

Lack of fundamental support of the American business system has left the way wide open for its detractors to undermine it in legislative halls, in political campaigning, in educational institutions and at public forums of all kinds. The country is reaching the point where its bread and gasoline are now furnished through the courtesy of foreigners. Americans should begin asking themselves why this is happening.

TOO LENIENT COURTS MOCK LAW ENFORCEMENT

Life imitates art, they say, and that caper dubbed "The Sting" pulled off the other day by Washington D.C. police and FBI agents was, indeed, like something out of the movies.

During a five-month investigation, undercover agents posing as out-of-town syndicate members and operating out of an abandoned warehouse bought more than 3,500 pieces of stolen property from various denizens of the criminal world—the fruit of countless muggings, break-ins, hijackings and auto thefts.

The goods, estimated to be worth more than $2.4 million, included television sets, kitchen appliances, automobiles, credit cards, government checks and equipment and even an electyrocardiagram machine stolen piece by piece from Prince George's County Hospital.

To celebrate the enterprise's success and to show their appreciation, the phony fences threw a party to which they invited all their friends. Then came "the sting"—the arrest of 108 persons and issuing of warrants for 75 more. It was the biggest such roundup in FBI and District of Columbia history.

Unfortunately, however, life has a way of stopping short of art. Or maybe it's the other way around. In movies or on television, the cracking of a case is usually the end of the story and the viewer is left with the satisfying knowledge that justice has triumphed and the evil-doers will receive their appropriate desserts at the hands of the courts.

Of the 108 arrested at the party, 70 had previously been arrested and charged with similar crimes—some of them repeatedly—and 21 were out on parole following convictions. One man had been arrested at least six times for burglary, forgery and other crimes, and in each instance had been released without bail.

In keeping with this sorry pattern, federal magistrates immediately released several of those seized in the haul on their own recognizance.

Claiming that 600 persons indicted on felony charges in Washington are now fugitives, assistant U.S. attorney Charles Roistacher complained bitterly that "most crimes are by people out on bail. The majority of those arrested (at the party) were hard-core criminals. People who commit crimes while out on parole or probation are making a mockery of the system. They are thumbing their noses at the courts."

But lest anyone think this is a problem involving only your ordinary street mugger or burglar or thief, consider the case of the "great grain ripoff" which was coming to a conclusion in New Orleans about the same time as the Washington affair.

Charged on 36 counts of conspiring to steal some $1.7 million worth of grain over a four-year period, two large export companies—Garnac Grain, Inc., and Archer-Daniels-Midland Co.—pleaded "no contest" in U.S. District Court and were fined $10,000 each.

This was not even a slap on the wrist. It was more like a gently stroking with a feather. The costs of the two-year investigation no doubt were far more than the puny $20,000 in fines.

When a felon is sent back onto the street to resume plying his trade even before the arresting officer has completed his paperwork, or corporate criminals are given minuscule fines representing the merest fraction of the illegal profits, something is seriously wrong with our system of justice.

One of these days law enforcement officials, who work hard months or years on an investigation or who daily risk their lives to protect society, are going to stop and ask themselves: "Why bother?"

CANDIDATES WILD ABOUT HARRY

"I tell you, Al" he said, addressing his good friend, Albatross Ives, "I don't understand politics anymore. It used to be that the presidential nomination was a closed corporation with everybody standing on the outside yelling to get in. As soon as they opened up to the public, people lost interest.

"It seems that more people don't care about who's going to be our next president than do. Look at Nebraska last week. Jimmy Carter's unstoppable juggernaut gets beaten by Frank Church, for crying out loud. Three quarters of the people in Nebraska think Frank Church is a new religious sect. What kind of juggernaut gets stopped by that?"

"I know what you mean, Sam. The apathy has reached a frenzied pitch. There's only one really popular politician left."

"Who's that?"

"Harry Truman. All the candidates invoke his name whenever they see something that looks like a voter. Jimmy Carter says Truman is proof that a president doesn't have to lie. Jerry Ford gets choked up at the very mention of his name. That new fellow, Jerry Brown, says he wants to be just like Truman when he grows up."

"What about Hubert Humphrey?"

"He thinks he is Harry Truman. The only guy who doesn't want to be like Harry Truman is Ronald Reagan."

"If I had my imitation of Teddy Roosevelt down as well as he has, I wouldn't want to be Harry Truman either."

"It's funny the way these things go in cycles. I remember when all the candidates wanted to be like Franklin Delano Roosevelt. Politicians love to copy a winner."

"You're right, Sam. He never really had a vogue. Too hard, I think. He had a combination of strength, authority and befuddlement that couldn't be copied. Kennedy, John Kennedy was the last politician everybody wanted to be like."

"Yeah. Even Nixon wanted to be like him. Remember that picture of him, wading in the ocean on that lonely beach, just like Kennedy—except that Nixon had forgotten to take off his shoes."

"Who says he forgot?"

"Do you think politicians will ever want to be like him? He wasn't any more unpopular than Truman was in his day, you know."

"I think it depends on how big the parolee vote gets."

"How do you account for Truman's comeback?"

"It's a combination of things, Sam. It's a kind of nostalgia for a simpler time when we thought we knew what was right and who our friends were. Mainly, though, it's Truman's outspokenness. After the Nixon-Johnson years, the people are yearning for politicians who tell it like it is."

"Boy, I sure don't feel that way."

"You don't? Why?"

"Al, I have heard Ronald Reagan talk about the Panama Canal and I have listened to Jerry Ford explain Locks and Dam 26. I have been to the mountaintop with Jimmy Carter, to the Land of Oz with Jerry Brown and been there when Scoop Jackson talked tough to the Russians—and practically everybody else, for that matter.

"I was in the room when Hubert Humphrey announced it was past his bedtime. I have been sent a message by George Wallace. I have also heard Morris Udall and Fred Harris tell jokes. Al, the American people have one chance and one chance only in this election."

"What's that?"

"That those guys are all liars. Because if they really believe that stuff they keep saying, we're in deep trouble."

'WHO STOLE THE MOMENTUM?'

WASHINGTON — President Ford was going through his closet the other day. Mrs. Ford said, "Gerry, what on earth are you looking for?"

"My momentum. I saw it here last month, but it seems to be gone. You didn't send it out to the cleaners, did you?"

"I haven't touched it," Mrs. Ford said. "I'll check with the household staff."

Mrs. Ford went down to the White House kitchen where all the help were eating lunch. "Have any of you seen the President's momentum? It seems to have been misplaced."

The staff all shook their heads. The upstairs maid said, "No, ma'am. You told us never to touch the President's momentum -- or his football helmet."

Mrs. Ford went back upstairs. "The staff says they haven't seen it. Are you sure you didn't loan it to anybody?"

The president thought hard. "I don't think so. I'll call Kissinger. Maybe he knows where I put it ... Henry, this is the President. I hate to bother you with this, but you didn't take my momentum, did you? ... No, I'm not accusing you of anything ... Henry, I believe in you, I trust you ... Henry, will you stop shouting? ... Yes, it's gone ... Why did I call you?... Well, I just thought you might have picked it up by mistake because you thought it was yours ... What do you mean you've lost your momentum, too? ... Where did you lose yours? Either at Helsinki or the Panama Canal?...

"This is very strange. Somebody is going around stealing our momentums. I better get the FBI on this ...

"Get me Clarence Kelley.... Clarence, this is the President. I seem to have a problem ... Someone has stolen my momentum for the presidential primaries ... It was all wrapped up in a nice box with a big ribbon on it, and now it's gone ... Betty and I have looked everywhere for it ... Could you send over some agents right away?"'

A few hours later.

"Mr. President, we're from the FBI. We understand your momentum was stolen from you."

"Either stolen or lost."

"Who had access to it?"

"Let's see, there was Betty, the children, David Kennerly, Bo Callaway, Rogers Morton and my entire campaign staff."

"That's quite a few people. Do you have any reason to suspect any of them of wanting to take it away from you?"

"No, I don't. It only had sentimental value."

"Think hard, Mr. President. Did you take the momentum with you on any of your trips?"

"Let me see, I believe I took it to Texas with me when I was campaigning there."

"And that was the last time you saw it?"

"As a matter of fact, yes."

"Did you see any suspicious people hanging around who might have taken the momentum when you weren't looking?"

"Well, there was this old movie star who kept fondling it all the time. Betty, what was the name of the old movie actor with the dyed red hair – you know, the one who played 'the Gipper' in 'Knute Rockne'?"

"Ronald Reagan."

"That's the one. I gave him a pair of White House cuff links and a tie clasp, but he jokingly said he'd rather have the momentum instead. You don't think the old guy took it, do you?"

"It's a possibility. The real problem, Mr. President, is there is no law against anyone stealing somebody else's momentum. It's not nice, but it's not a crime."

"Well, then, how do I get it returned?"

"If I were you, I'd steal it back from Reagan in California."

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Jack Anderson

JACK ANDERSON SAYS:
Modern-Day Dreyfus?
with LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON— The Army slipped a military promotion list past President Ford last year without telling him it was engineered by cantankerous old Sen. Strom Thurmond, R.-S.C., as part of a personal vendetta.

The unwitting Ford let the dubious document go through even though three days earlier he had signed a legitimate promotion list and had ordered it sent to the Senate.

There is evidence that the President was the victim of some sleight-of-hand, involving fancy razor-blade work by the Army on presidential documents and an erased date on the promotion papers. Indeed, White House records may actually have been faked.

The Defense Department began an investigation of the bizarre case only to have it quietly quashed, say our sources. The Justice Department also started an investigation that has gotten nowhere.

Thurmond has a strong whip hand over both the Army and Justice, it's worth noting, as a power on the Senate committees that oversee the two departments.

The events that led to the document tampering began as an exercise in Pentagon politics. A brilliant young lieutenant colonel, Wilfred Ebel, became a leading contender to head the 100,000-strong Reserve Officers Association.

Stern old Strom, a past president of the association, looked upon it as his private preserve. He fully intended to install his own protege, a lackluster World War II crony, Maj. Gen. Milmnor Roberts, as the new president.

But the 44-year-old Ebel had an awesome record, complete with medals and citations for "tremendous service" and "personal integrity." His name was also one of the 405 on a promotion list that had been drawn up by the Army's most respected officers. It had been approved by the Pentagon and, on Jan. 14, 1975, had been signed by President Ford. A Pentagon memo adds that Ford had "forwarded (it) to the Senate on 15 January 1975."

But a funny thing happened to Ebel's name on the way from the President's desk to Capitol Hill.

First, Ebel's rivals in the reserves, Thurmond and Roberts, got together for a little chat. Thurmond forthwith directed an aide to call the Army and request, as a classified Army document attests, that Ebel's "nomination ... be held in abeyance."

The Thurmond aide, according to the document, made allegations of misconduct against Ebel. But the document adds, significantly, that it appeared Roberts "may have been the source" of the rumor mongering.

Although the President already had signed Ebel's promotion and had readied it for the Senate, the Army's irrepressible political boss, then-Secretary Howard "Bo" Callaway, suddenly tried to recall Ebel's nomination.

It appeared that Callaway was too late, that the nomination was out of his hands. Nevertheless, he had his special assistant, Col. Peter Kempf, write to the White House asking that Ebel's name be stricken.

Nowhere in this memo, which we have obtained from White House sources, does Callaway's office warn the President that the vengeful Strom was behind the eleventh-hour move.

Instead, Callaway simply sent Ford a new promotion list. Incredibly, Ebel's name had been cut out with a razor blade. Then the sheet had been Xeroxed to make it look like Ebel's name had never been on the list at all.

The razor-blade artistry arounsed the suspicion of Army Adjutant General Verne Bowers, who questioned the action. According to classified testimony taken by the Army inspector general, "General Bowers expressed some reservations about removing the name from the promotion list. He wanted to make sure it was the Secretary of the Army that was directing this and not someone using his name."

Bowers withdrew his objections only after verifying that the orders had been issued by Callaway personally. The new list was then sent to the White House, which forwarded it to the Senate. But our investigation has raised still other questions about the case, with Watergate overtones.

For instance, the documents sent to the Senate are highly unorthodox. The final page of the new list is fine bond paper, with Gerald Ford's signature. But the sheets on top, one of which contains the Xerox sheet with Ebel's name razored out, are all Xerox paper. No other Army nomination papers are this mix of good bond and crude paper.

The possibility that Ford never actually signed the final promotion list but that his signature was simply attached to it is heightened by the fact that the bond-paper nominations are prepared in St. Louis on a special typewriter. It is difficult to see how a new last page cound have been typed up in three days in St. Louis and sent to the White House.

If the last page had been prepared in St. Louis, why weren't the other pages also typed up, too? What appears to have happened, despite White Houe denials, is that the final page from the first list was used and the new list, excluding Ebel's name, was stapled on top. This would mean, according to Ebel's lawyer, former Pentagon Assistant General Counsel Frank Bartimo, that Ford never actually signed a list without Ebel's name on it.

Military spokesmen deny they quashed an investigation of the case. But they admit that Thurmond intervened with Callaway and that Callaway pulled back the list after the President signed it. This, claims the Army, is perfectly legal. But the case has certain parallels to the famed Dreyfus tragedy, in which a young captain was driven from the French army.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Clouds Over Manhattan:
Labor Chief Says 'Chaos' May Hit Democrats' Convention City if Pay Raises Forbidden

NEW YORK -- Though the script still is unfinished, there's an off-off Broadway drama being played out here amid verbal thunder-works which is being watched with hypnotized political horrow by some Democratic National Committee leaders.

No fiction, this. All real life. And in the end this mammoth city, either during or after the nominating convention, may well be in "chaos." It may be struck by the nation's biggest municipal employes local union. Its leader, Victor Gotbaum, who speaks for 125,000 members and followers, is saying that he expects solidarity and support on the line from the many other powerful unions, whose contracts also expire at 12:01 a.m. July 1.

"We are fortunate that the July 1 deadline involves many unions -- transport workers, sanitation men, teamsters, police, fire, communications workers, and others," says Gotbaum, the leader of District Council 37, American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employes (AFSCME).

"We will be asking the other civil service unions to join in our determined stand to protect our members and the process of collective bargaining...Attention must now be paid to the needs of the workers we represent, who are suffering terribly from inflation. If this is not done, then it will be the irresponsible forces of management that will bring about the chaos."

Characteristically Gotbaum speaks as a militant labor chief does. He places the responsibility on management -- which in this drama consists of the governor, Hugh Carey, the mayor, Abe Beame, and an Emergency Financial Control Board (EFCB) appinted by them to cut the fat out of the $13.4 billion in the Big Apple's annual budget.

They are all Democrats. So the issue is fraternal, perhaps politically fratricidal. Thus it will be judged by the nation. The final act will come this July during the moment of one of the greatest concentrations of print and electronic media in recent histroy.

Thus the issue will be labor's right to strike an entire municipality. And labor's willingness to do so even if it's their own party in power. This could well become one of the national issues in the presidential campaign.

In this scenario the two central figures are former Army men. Don't underestimate either. The first out front – big, six-foot-two, softespoken even during the scatalogical denunciations, is 54-year-old Vic Gotbaum. He's the essence of today's militant trade unionism. He's all guts. He may be all wrong in his strategy but he'll hit the city's no-spend line as he hit Normandy Beach D-Day plus two wo ks as a machine gunner.

To him the restless, ethnically mixed union of civil service workers comes first. His party next. He says he's not bargaining for the Democratic party, though he's a Mo Udall degegate. he certainly is bargaining for his behemoth union, the biggest chunk of membership in the swiftest growing public sector international labor union, AFSCME, headed by Jerry Wurf, now planning its 22nd biennial convention.

When Gotbaum goes radical, he's programmed, so he could paralyze the city. And he says if such "chaos" develops it will be the fault of the mayor, the governor and the Emergency Financial Control Board.

No script now should predict what could happen. I'm told the police won't go in for job action -- maybe. But the huge city could stand still.

To sum it up, when referring to the decision of the financial control board to reject any wage-fringe increases unless accompanied by increased civil service productivity to match and even up costs, Gotbaum snapped, "I don't give a damn about their policy. Did you ever hear of the strike?"

If by July 1 there is no fully approved renewed contract covering the 125,000 city employes in 350 job classifications, then there will be a strike situation,according to Gotbaum, who blames the board.

All of which leads to the second star player in this Gotterdammerung -- the 46-year-old Secretary of the Treasury William Simon, and old Army man himself. As Simon sees it, Gotbaum in no way can get what he wants -- namely an income increase for the city employes in any fashion.

Simon rejects the theory of escalating wages based on increased productivity. There's got to be a cut in municipal expenses, not just the equalization of escalating costs. There's just no fat to cut, Simon says. So there can't be any wage-fringe increases if the city is to save itself.

"Point is, will the city have the money to repay the total loan ($2.3 billion)?" Simon asked me rhetorically. "I' ll review the matter in the next month in view of the wholesale strike threats. These increased wage-fringe costs may make repayment of the city's federal debt impossible."

Simon and his colleagues say that Mayor Abe Beame, more harassed than Joshua after 39 years of waiting, wants the federal government "to take the big Apple on faith."

Well, it may or may not happen. There's $1.1 billion of the peoples' money at stake in the July loan alone. The issue is simple.Gotbaum, who municipal employe unions in cities from San Diego east are watching, plans to smash the tough national mayoralty-no-more-money policies.Says Gotbaum, "The (Democratic) convention has no affect on me. I never gave anyone any promises."

Obviously something new has been added to national politics.

Engineers at Rolla discuss housing underground

ROLLA — When a couple of engineers at University of Missouri- Rolla talk about low cost housing they mean low not only in terms of less expensive but low in terms of space — like underground!

In a presentation made Tuesday at the IAHS International Housing Symposium in Atlanta, Ga., Drs. N. B. Aughenbaugh and John D. Rockaway suggest that there are a number of advantages to building living units beneath the earth's surface – particularly in urban areas if geological conditions are favorable.

Dr. Aughenbaugh is chairman of UMR's department of mining, petroleum and geological engineering and Dr. Rockaway is associate professor of geological engineering.

Because of land constrictions in metropolitan areas, costs are high and low cost housing projects for the limited income population have developed as apartment complexes, the engineers explain. "All too frequently, these complexes of closely- spaced structures have created more social problems than they have solved," they say.

"In addition, maintenance costs of the buildings have been excessively high and much needed recreational areas, parks and green zones are inadequate."

Citing examples of current development of underground space for commercial and industrial use in Montreal and Kansas City, Aughenbaugh and Rockaway propose to carry this type of development a step fruther and create living units beneath the surface.

Advantages of developing underground areas include: lower construction costs; conservation of heating and cooling energy; lower maintenance costs; lower overhead; more fire resistance; lower insurance rates; protection from surface hazards such as wind, hail, snow, ice and explosions; protection from surface noises and vibrations; high load bearing capacity for the floor; more freedom of location; and preservation of the surface for other uses.

According to the authors, cost studies in the United States and other parts of the world have established that equivalent space can be developed more cheaply underground than at the surface.

If the subsurface space is developed in an earth material that has a marketable value, such as limestone or other sound rock for aggregate or sand and gravel, the excavated material can be sold thereby reducing development costs. In many cases, profits form selling the excavated material cover the cost of mining.

"Probably the biggest reason for developing underground is the attractiveness of the huge savings in energy for ventilating the space," they say. "Costs for heating and cooling underground are just a fraction of those needed for surface structures. Cost ratios for installation and operation are in the magnitude of 10:1 or higher."

Technically, the development of underground housing is feasible in most areas. Mining and excavation techniques used for commercial and industrial purposes are well developed, according to the two engineers.

Some modification, with emphasis on geological, architectural and aesthetic factors, will be necessary. For instance, rock walls can be utilized to give a pleasing appearance. The two engineers say once false ceilings and walls are in place and carpeting laid, rooms underground are comfortable.

"Unfortunately, it is generally assumed the psychological responses to "subterranean living' would be overwhelmingly negative," says Drs. Aughenbaugh and Rockaway. "However, opinion surveys of people who work underground indicate a strong acceptance of the underground environment.

If properly educated in advance, people should have no fear of living underground. The 'back - to- the- caveman' image will have to be surplanted by one of comfortable, economical and environmentally pleasing living in step with modern technology.

"Therefore," the two educators conclude, "it is time planners seriously consider developing underground living complexes because the space is available, technology suitable and the economics feasible."

The Federal debt per capita was only 93 cents in 1857. In 1946 it reached a high of $1,905.

Food, drug tax repeal attempted

ST. LOUIS (AP) — An initiative petition drive effort to submit repeal of the sales tax on food and drugs to voters this fall will be "foolhardy in the long run," Lt. Gov. William Phelps said today.

Speaking at the opening ceremonies of the St. Louis Area Senior Fair '76, Phelps said any "across-the board exemption would severely limit incoming revenues" for the state, prompting an increase somewhere else to recover the lost funds.

Officials of the petition drive say they will submit their petitions to the secretary of state's office for certification shortly before the July 1 deadline. If valid signatures of 8 per cent of the voters in each of seven of the state's 10 congressional districts are obtained, the measure would be submitted to voters for approval at the general election.

If adopted, the constitutional measure would repeal the sales tax, both at the state and local levels, on all food and prescription drugs beginning in 1978 at an estimated cost to the state of between $140 million and $180 million a year. The proposal does not include any method for recovering the lost revenues.

Supporters of the sales tax repeal claim the tax applied to food and drugs is unfair since such items are a necessity.

An attempt to repeal the sales tax on prescription drugs alone, estimated to cost about $3 million annually in lost revenues, failed in the last session of the legislature.

As an alternative to outright repeal of the tax, Phelps suggested a plan for tax credits for the elderly and needy, operating similarly to the so-called circuit-breaker tax credit for property taxes now in effect for the elderly who rent housing.

TRCC to renew loan

POPLAR BLUFF — The Three Rivers Community College District Board of Trustees approved two motions to borrow $186,000 for operating expenses at their May 19 meeting.

Dr. H. Tudor Westover, college president, told the board it will be necessary to renew the present capital renovation loan of $36,000. The loan will be retired in December. Also, Dr. Westover informed the board the college has received $12,794, which is TRCC's share of the state emergency appropriation for fiscal year 1975.

Dr. Westover said it will be necessary to borrow $150,000 in July for 90 days or less. Of this amount, $107,000 is owed to the college by the state for various occupational projects. The money will be repaid when the state appropriation for 1976-77 is received.

The general state appropriation anticipated for TRCC is $658,000. With this appropriation it would be possible to meet cost of living increases for faculty and staff as outlined in contract riders.

Dr. Westover told the board there is a possibility the governor may release a portion of the three per cent of junior college funds being withheld.

In other action, the board approved the employment of Mrs. Kathryn Farris as director of nursing. She holds a bachelor's degree and a master's degree from Washington University in St. Louis and taught at TRCC in 1973-75.

The board approved a resolution of appreication to Tony Cates for his services as a trustee. Cates, who is from Ellsinore, was elected to the board in 1970 and served for six years. He was vice chairman of the board 1972-74. The board will present him a plaque in recognition of his leadership and dedication.

Glass receives BA degree

SHERMAN, Tex. — James Dale Glass of Sikeston, Mo., received a bachelor of arts degree during Austin College's commencement exercises ending its 126th year.

Food, drug tax repeal attempted

ST. LOUIS (AP) — An initiative petition drive effort to submit repeal of the sales tax on food and drugs to voters this fall will be "foolhardy in the long run," Lt. Gov. William Phelps said today.

Speaking at the opening ceremonies of the St. Louis Area Senior Fair '76, Phelps said any "across-the board exemption would severely limit incoming revenues" for the state, prompting an increase somewhere else to recover the lost funds.

Officials of the petition drive say they will submit their petitions to the secretary of state's office for certification shortly before the July 1 deadline. If valid signatures of 8 per cent of the voters in each of seven of the state's 10 congressional districts are obtained, the measure would be submitted to voters for approval at the general election.

If adopted, the constitutional measure would repeal the sales tax, both at the state and local levels, on all food and prescription drugs beginning in 1978 at an estimated cost to the state of between $140 million and $180 million a year. The proposal does not include any method for recovering the lost revenues.

Supporters of the sales tax repeal claim the tax applied to food and drugs is unfair since such items are a necessity.

An attempt to repeal the sales tax on prescription drugs alone, estimated to cost about $3 million annually in lost revenues, failed in the last session of the legislature.

As an alternative to outright repeal of the tax, Phelps suggested a plan for tax credits for the elderly and needy, operating similarly to the so-called circuit-breaker tax credit for property taxes now in effect for the elderly who rent housing.

Engineers at Rolla discuss housing underground

ROLLA — When a couple of engineers at University of Missouri- Rolla talk about low cost housing they mean low not only in terms of less expensive but low in terms of space — like underground!

In a presentation made Tuesday at the IAHS International Housing Symposium in Atlanta, Ga., Drs. N. B. Aughenbaugh and John D. Rockaway suggest that there are a number of advantages to building living units beneath the earth's surface – particularly in urban areas if geological conditions are favorable.

Dr. Aughenbaugh is chairman of UMR's department of mining, petroleum and geological engineering and Dr. Rockaway is associate professor of geological engineering.

Because of land constrictions in metropolitan areas, costs are high and low cost housing projects for the limited income population have developed as apartment complexes, the engineers explain. "All too frequently, these complexes of closely- spaced structures have created more social problems than they have solved," they say.

"In addition, maintenance costs of the buildings have been excessively high and much needed recreational areas, parks and green zones are inadequate."

Citing examples of current development of underground space for commercial and industrial use in Montreal and Kansas City, Aughenbaugh and Rockaway propose to carry this type of development a step fruther and create living units beneath the surface.

Advantages of developing underground areas include: lower construction costs; conservation of heating and cooling energy; lower maintenance costs; lower overhead; more fire resistance; lower insurance rates; protection from surface hazards such as wind, hail, snow, ice and explosions; protection from surface noises and vibrations; high load bearing capacity for the floor; more freedom of location; and preservation of the surface for other uses.

According to the authors, cost studies in the United States and other parts of the world have established that equivalent space can be developed more cheaply underground than at the surface.

If the subsurface space is developed in an earth material that has a marketable value, such as limestone or other sound rock for aggregate or sand and gravel, the excavated material can be sold thereby reducing development costs. In many cases, profits form selling the excavated material cover the cost of mining.

"Probably the biggest reason for developing underground is the attractiveness of the huge savings in energy for ventilating the space," they say. "Costs for heating and cooling underground are just a fraction of those needed for surface structures. Cost ratios for installation and operation are in the magnitude of 10:1 or higher."

Technically, the development of underground housing is feasible in most areas. Mining and excavation techniques used for commercial and industrial purposes are well developed, according to the two engineers.

Some modification, with emphasis on geological, architectural and aesthetic factors, will be necessary. For instance, rock walls can be utilized to give a pleasing appearance. The two engineers say once false ceilings and walls are in place and carpeting laid, rooms underground are comfortable.

"Unfortunately, it is generally assumed the psychological responses to "subterranean living' would be overwhelmingly negative," says Drs. Aughenbaugh and Rockaway. "However, opinion surveys of people who work underground indicate a strong acceptance of the underground environment.

If properly educated in advance, people should have no fear of living underground. The 'back - to- the- caveman' image will have to be surplanted by one of comfortable, economical and environmentally pleasing living in step with modern technology.

"Therefore," the two educators conclude, "it is time planners seriously consider developing underground living complexes because the space is available, technology suitable and the economics feasible."

The Federal debt per capita was only 93 cents in 1857. In 1946 it reached a high of $1,905.

TRCC to renew loan

POPLAR BLUFF — The Three Rivers Community College District Board of Trustees approved two motions to borrow $186,000 for operating expenses at their May 19 meeting.

Dr. H. Tudor Westover, college president, told the board it will be necessary to renew the present capital renovation loan of $36,000. The loan will be retired in December. Also, Dr. Westover informed the board the college has received $12,794, which is TRCC's share of the state emergency appropriation for fiscal year 1975.

Dr. Westover said it will be necessary to borrow $150,000 in July for 90 days or less. Of this amount, $107,000 is owed to the college by the state for various occupational projects. The money will be repaid when the state appropriation for 1976-77 is received.

The general state appropriation anticipated for TRCC is $658,000. With this appropriation it would be possible to meet cost of living increases for faculty and staff as outlined in contract riders.

Dr. Westover told the board there is a possibility the governor may release a portion of the three per cent of junior college funds being withheld.

In other action, the board approved the employment of Mrs. Kathryn Farris as director of nursing. She holds a bachelor's degree and a master's degree from Washington University in St. Louis and taught at TRCC in 1973-75.

The board approved a resolution of appreication to Tony Cates for his services as a trustee. Cates, who is from Ellsinore, was elected to the board in 1970 and served for six years. He was vice chairman of the board 1972-74. The board will present him a plaque in recognition of his leadership and dedication.

Mom uses illness to keep her in line

Dear Ann Landers: Last November, Mother survived a heart attack. She has made remarkable progress and is back to work, part-time. But this very clever lady has been using her heart attack to keep tabs on me every moment. ("In case something happens, where can you be reached?") She also threatens me with "killing" her if I go against her wishes.

I am a 40-year-old, unmarried, self-supporting woman and have been on my own for several years. Since Christmas I have had a low-key romance with a man my mother despises. He has invited me to spend a week in July on his sister and brother-in-law's boat. Everything would be perfectly proper. I have accepted the invitation. Now mother warns me that if I go she will probably have another heart attack "and this one will be fatal." What should I do? — Mouse-Trapped

Dear Mouse: Your analysis of the situation indicates you understand it well. It's up to you to decide whether or not you are going to allow yourself to be manipulated by a neurotic, domineering mother. I hope you are strong enough to foil her unsubtle attempts at blackmail.

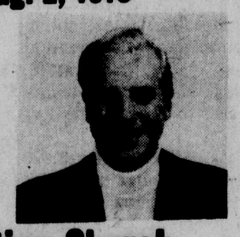

Dear Ann Landers: Last night this jerk I am married to wrote you a letter. He used our daughter's yellow tablet paper and green ink, waved it under my nose, sealed the envelope and put a stamp on it. Then he went to the post office.

I beg of you, Ann, please don't print that lunatic's letter. To begin with, he is a terrible liar -- makes thing up out of thin air. He also has a way of making himself look good and me lousy. The man has no dignity and no conscience. I'm sure his letter would be recognized by all our friends and relatives. I wouldn't be able to show my facein this town. I would come out looking like a psychotic and he would be a saint.

I won't be able to sleep until you tell me that letter won't get into the papers. Thank you, Ann. -- Irene In Montana

Dear Montana: I have your husband's letter in my hand and you have my word, it will NOT appear in the paper. So good-night, Irene. Get some sleep.

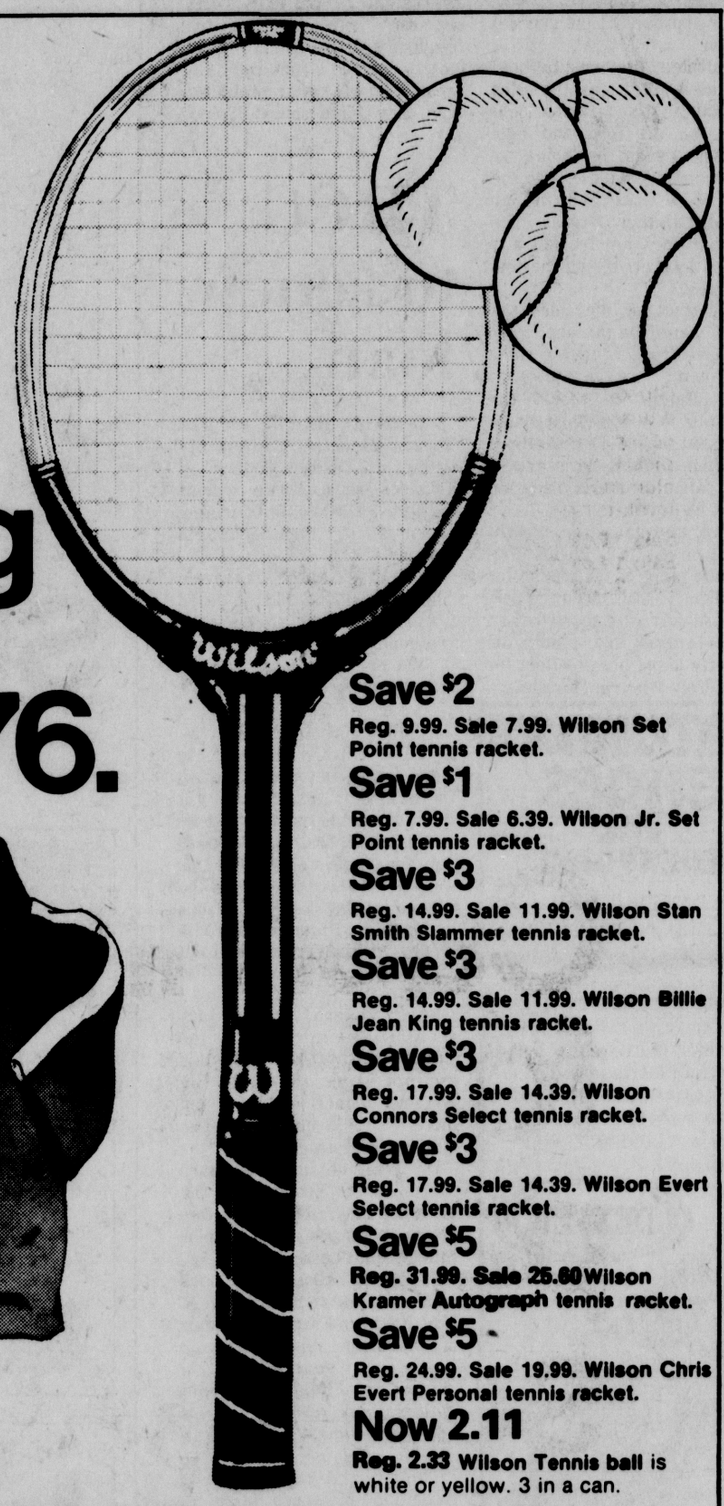

What kind of wedding goes with today's new life styles? Does anything go? Ann Landers' completely new "The Bride's Guide" tells what's right for today's weddings. Bits of bone in meat items not noticeable

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some consumers probably have been getting finely ground bits of bones in their hot dogs for more than a year and haven't even realized it, Agriculture Department officials say.

The practice involves the use of machines which grind up neck bones, ribs and other hard-to-scrape bones from cattle and hog carcasses cut up by food processors. Under pressure, the mixture is forced through sieves which separate most of the bone from the squashed meat.

But finely ground bits of bone remain in the salvaged meat, which then is used to make hot dogs, pork sausage, canned beef stew, frozen pizzas and other products. Department experts say the bone bits cannot be detected when the food is eaten.

Federal permission to use mechanical de-boners nearly 18 months ago was made known Wednesday at the first of several Agriculture Department briefings to inform consumers about proposed rules that would officially approve mechanical deboners. Those devices been used since late 1974 under informal department approval.

How To Cook Gourmet Fare In Minutes

By TOM HOGE
AP Newsfeatures Writer

For the housewife whose husband has an unnerving habit of asking his boss or an important client to dinner on short notice, the latest book by Carol Cutler should prove a boon.

Three years ago Mrs. Cutler came to the aid of heart patients with "Cuisine For Your Heart's Delight," an ingenious cookbook which supplied an enticing assortment of gourmet dishes, all containing little if any cholesterol.

Now Carol Cutler has produced a dazzling array of recipes that are in the main easy to prepare and which should satisfy the most demanding palate. In "The Six-Minute Souffle," published by Clarkson N. Potter Inc., Mrs. Cutler has assembled nearly 250 formulas designed to make your dinner party a success.

They are the result of hectic days she spent in Paris in 1958 when her husband was stationed there as editor of the European edition of the New York Herald Tribune.

Living in an apartment that had only a tiny kitchen with a two-burner stove, Mrs. Cutler managed to bring forth a series of mouth-watering dishes that made her home a mecca for the foreign correspondents and diplomats she and her husband knew.

Mrs. Cutler became expert at preparing fine food in a short time. For instance, she learned that in eight minutes she could assemble a tangy Greek eggplant soup and in six minutes whip up a Roquefort souffle, light as a feather and meltingly moist on the inside.

The book also contains such exotic delights as Emerald Cream, a cold herb custard, and broiled grapefruit seasoned with chutney and brandy. For those who like oysters there is a formula for broiling the bivalves and serving them with a hot champagne sauce. Not forgetting those with heart problems, Mrs. Cutler provides low cholesterol variations for 90 per cent of the recipes.

Here is a recipe for a dish she calls Sunday-night soup, for unexpected guests who linger on for Sunday supper. It takes only 9 minutes to cook.

3 tablespoons oil
1 medium sized onion, sliced thin
1 teaspoon curry powder
2 cups cold water
2 cups beef broth
½ package frozen leaf spinach, thawed
1 tablespoon Madeira or Port wine
grated Parmesan cheese

Heat oil in 2-quart pot, add onion, cover and simmer 2 minutes. Onion must not be brown. Add curry powder, stir and simmer 1 minute. Add broth and cold water. Bring to gentle boil, cover and simmer 5 minutes. Squeeze excess water from spinach and cut into 3 parts, adding to soup and bring to fast boil. Remove pot from heat and add wine. Serve with grated Parmesan. For low-cholesterol version, use poly-unsaturated oil for frying onion and serve with low-fat grated cheese. Serves 6.

Author Calls Italy Matriarchal Society

By JOHN J. MULLINS
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — It is the women, not the men, who run things in the desperately poor mountain villages of southern Italy, says an author who spent about 20 years in the area.

Ann Cornelisen, author of "Women of the Shadows," said in an interview that she thought those women were much the same as the desperately poor in the South and Appalachia sections of the United States.

Her book, the third she has written on the Abruzzo and Lucania regions of Italy, presents a case that society there is a matriarchy, not a patriarchy as others have said.

The women are not placed on pedestals by their men, but they do much of the work, provide much of the family's incomes, and make the decisions that matter.

"There aren't any large decisions," Mrs. Cornelisen said, but "women have taken over all the decisions. They do the work only because there is nobody else. If man could function as he should, they would let him."

The women work in the fields, do other women's housework and errands as well as their own, and cook and care for children.

Bringing about this situation is the lack of jobs for men. The villages provide little outside of working in tiny fields, and there is not much chance of emigrating with great success.

Men can, and do, go north in Italy or to West Germany to find factory jobs. But they have little training or skills, and they get the lowest jobs at half pay if they are lucky enough to get those.

They send money home and return at Christmas and Easter. "The women are left coping with children and life in general," Mrs. Cornelisen said.

Bluff policeman charged in shooting

A second degree murder charge was filed Monday against suspended city policeman Steve Fowler in connection with the fatal shooting of Allen R. Yarbro, 29, Route 4, early Sunday morning.

A report of the charge was obtained from the records of the Butler County Magistrate Court this morning.

Butler County Prosecuting Attorney Ernie Richardson, who filed the charge, was out of town today and unavailable for questioning. When asked Monday morning if he was considering charges, Richardson said, "No comment."

Fowler, 24, was formally arraigned in Magistrate Court Monday afternoon and bond was set at $25,000. Mr. and Mrs. Leamon Fowler, 2006 Meadows Road, Fowler's parents, have posted bond for their son.

Fowler, a police narcotics investigator, has been routinely suspended from his duties.

A preliminary hearing is scheduled in Magistrate Court at 9 a.m. June 3.

In his charge, Prosecutor Richardson claims Fowler "willfully, unlawfully, feloniously, premeditatedly, and of his malice aforethought" assaulted Yarbro with a pistol "thereby inflicting a mortal wound on Yarbro."

Because of the charge, Butler County Coroner Larry Cotrell has decided not to call an inquest on the shooting, he said today.

"Generally an inquest is held to determine if there is enough evidence to file a charge," Coroner Cotrell said. "Because a charge already has been filed an inquest will not be necessary."

The charges against Fowler stem from a confrontation he and Yarbro had at 2 a.m. Sunday morning outside the mobile home of Mrs. Carolyn Potter, located in Midtown Mobile Home Village (office at 360 S. 11th St.)

Initial investigations by the Highway Patrol indicate Fowler had just completed his shift as a city policeman and was off-duty when he visited Mrs. Potter's home.

Officers said Yarbro, who also had been seeing Mrs. Potter, had called Fowler twice Saturday night threatening him. While Fowler was at the Potter residence, Yarbro came to the door but was not admitted by Mrs. Potter. When he returned a second time Fowler went outside to talk to Yarbro, officials said.

Details of the shooting are sketchy, but officers said Yarbro apparently began advancing on Fowler who drew his service pistol and warned Yarbro to stop or he would shoot.

An autopsy performed Sunday morning about eight hours after the shooting revealed that Yarbro was shot "numerous times."

Police reports show that there have been other alleged confrontations between Fowler and Yarbro in which Mrs. Potter was involved.

The incident between the two men occurred Thursday, four days before the shooting, in which Fowler drew his service pistol, police said.

According to reports, Mrs. Potter had called Fowler Thursday evening advising him that she had received threatening phone calls from Yarbro earlier in the morning.

Mrs. Potter said Yarbro had visited her home at 3 that morning but was refused entry. The woman said when she left her home at 8:15 a.m. to go to work she discovered the coil wire missing from her car.

During the morning, Mrs. Potter said, Yarbro called her at work several times and admitted tampering with her car. At noon he entered the beauty shop where she works (Carolyn's Beauty Shop on Ditch Road) and pulled her hair in front of several customers, Mrs. Potter said.

At 5:30 p.m. Mrs. Potter said she called Fowler to pick her up.

Yarbro drove up a short time later as Mrs. Potter and Fowler were leaving in a car, reports said. Yarbro drove his car at the vehicle and struck it head-on about 10 miles-an-hour, according to reports.

Fowler said he got out of the car and ordered Yarbro out of his vehicle.

"Considering Yarbro's assault with the vehicle and not knowing whether Yarbro was armed, Investigator Fowler displayed his service weapon at the time. Yarbro became less hostile and agreed to stop his threats and assaults of Mrs. Potter. Investigator Fowler decided not to effect an arrest at the time and allowed Yarbro to leave," police reports say.

Yarbro had been scheduled to appear in Magistrate Court yesterday to answer charges of exhibiting a weapon in the presence of Mrs. Potter on Nov. 1, 1975. Fowler was listed as a prosecution witness in that case.

Changes in welfare payments released

WASHINGTON — State welfare agencies administering the food stamp program will not be able to authorize the acceptance of vouchers as payment for food stamps after April 30, 1977, under an amendment proposed by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Under the current voucher system, operating in several states, eligible food stamp recipients may be issued vouchers by the local welfare agency. These vouchers are redeemable for food stamps by issuance agents. The local welfare agency then reimburses the issuance agent in cash for the vouchers. In effect, the local agency is using the voucher system to pay for the recipient's food stamp allotment.

Once the vouchers have been converted to cash, the issuance agent deposits the funds in a Federal Reserve Bank for credit to USDA's account with the Treasury Department.

USDA regulations require local agencies to convert vouchers into cash within a specific limited time.

Because of the charge, Butler County Coroner Larry Cotrell has decided not to call an inquest on the shooting, he said today.

"Generally an inquest is held to determine if there is enough evidence to file a charge," Coroner Cotrell said. "Because a charge already has been filed an inquest will not be necessary."

The charges against Fowler stem from a confrontation he and Yarbro had at 2 a.m. Sunday morning outside the mobile home of Mrs. Carolyn Potter, located in Midtown Mobile Home Village (office at 360 S. 11th St.)

Initial investigations by the Highway Patrol indicate Fowler had just completed his shift as a city policeman and was off-duty when he visited Mrs. Potter's home.

Officers said Yarbro, who also had been seeing Mrs. Potter, had called Fowler twice Saturday night threatening him. While Fowler was at the Potter residence, Yarbro came to the door but was not admitted by Mrs. Potter. When he returned a second time Fowler went outside to talk to Yarbro, officials said.

Details of the shooting are sketchy, but officers said Yarbro apparently began advancing on Fowler who drew his service pistol and warned Yarbro to stop or he would shoot.

An autopsy performed Sunday morning about eight hours after the shooting revealed that Yarbro was shot "numerous times."

Police reports show that there have been other alleged confrontations between Fowler and Yarbro in which Mrs. Potter was involved.

The incident between the two men occurred Thursday, four days before the shooting, in which Fowler drew his service pistol, police said.

According to reports, Mrs. Potter had called Fowler Thursday evening advising him that she had received threatening phone calls from Yarbro earlier in the morning.

Mrs. Potter said Yarbro had visited her home at 3 that morning but was refused entry. The woman said when she left her home at 8:15 a.m. to go to work she discovered the coil wire missing from her car.

During the morning, Mrs. Potter said, Yarbro called her at work several times and admitted tampering with her car. At noon he entered the beauty shop where she works (Carolyn's Beauty Shop on Ditch Road) and pulled her hair in front of several customers, Mrs. Potter said.

At 5:30 p.m. Mrs. Potter said she called Fowler to pick her up.

Yarbro drove up a short time later as Mrs. Potter and Fowler were leaving in a car, reports said. Yarbro drove his car at the vehicle and struck it head-on about 10 miles-an-hour, according to reports.

Fowler said he got out of the car and ordered Yarbro out of his vehicle.

"Considering Yarbro's assault with the vehicle and not knowing whether Yarbro was armed, Investigator Fowler displayed his service weapon at the time. Yarbro became less hostile and agreed to stop his threats and assaults of Mrs. Potter. Investigator Fowler decided not to effect an arrest at the time and allowed Yarbro to leave," police reports say.

Yarbro had been scheduled to appear in Magistrate Court yesterday to answer charges of exhibiting a weapon in the presence of Mrs. Potter on Nov. 1, 1975. Fowler was listed as a prosecution witness in that case.

Changes in welfare payments released

WASHINGTON — State welfare agencies administering the food stamp program will not be able to authorize the acceptance of vouchers as payment for food stamps after April 30, 1977, under an amendment proposed by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Under the current voucher system, operating in several states, eligible food stamp recipients may be issued vouchers by the local welfare agency. These vouchers are redeemable for food stamps by issuance agents. The local welfare agency then reimburses the issuance agent in cash for the vouchers. In effect, the local agency is using the voucher system to pay for the recipient's food stamp allotment.

Once the vouchers have been converted to cash, the issuance agent deposits the funds in a Federal Reserve Bank for credit to USDA's account with the Treasury Department.

USDA regulations require local agencies to convert vouchers into cash within a specific limited time.

Bicentennial Commission has operational shakeup

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A shakeup in the operations of the Missouri American Revolution Bicentennial Commission has been undertaken in the wake of disclosures of internal problems hindering operations.

The commission fired its staff office manager Tuesday and asked the state Department of Consumer Affairs to take over its financial record keeping.

The action by the commission followed a three-hour meeting most of which was closed to the public. The meeting was called in the wake of published reports that there was friction between the commission's executive director and the office manager and that bills had gone unpaid for as long as 13 months.

There were also reports that less than 4,000 of the 21,000 bronze and silver bicentennial commemorative medallions have been sold with only six weeks remaining before the July 4 culmination of the nation's 200th birthday celebration. More than $80,000 in tax funds was initially used to purchase the medallions for resale.

The dismissal of office manager Carolyn Smallwood was left unexplained in the announcement by Commission Chairman William E. Parrish of action in the closed meeting.

But it had been reported earlier that executive director Ken White blamed Mrs. Smallwood for the failure to pay bills on time. Mrs. Smallwood reportedly acknowledged her responsibility in the situation, saying that there was not enough time to get the work done.

Members of the commission, who serve part-time and without pay, have requested an audit of the commission's operations so that shortcomings can be corrected before the commission goes out of existence at the end of the year. The audit will reportedly disclose some serious operating problems.

Despite the problems that have surrounded commission operations in the past, Parrish said the state could take "pride" in the program commemorating the bicentennial that has been underway. He said the staff is the smallest of any state commission staff in the nation, but that Missouri ranks among the top 10 states in the number of bicentennial communities and activities.

Parrish also said that a special sales promotion of the bicentennial medallions will be under way soon in cooperation with banks and other financial institutions.

All volunteer military quotas creating problems for recruiters

WASHINGTON (AP) — Marine recruiters have been pressured into filling their enlistment quotas with unqualified men whose shortcomings quickly make them targets of abuse from boot camp drill instructors, according to testimony before a House subcommittee.

The villain of this scenario, the House panel was told Tuesday, is the concept of an all-volunteer military that forces recruiters who must meet quotas to cheat on standards when signing up enlistees.

Marine Commandant Louis H. Wilson and his manpower deputy, Lt. Gen. Robert H. Barrow, were scheduled to testify today before the House military subcommittee conducting the probe.

A former Marine recruiter from Detroit told the panel Tuesday that recruiters cheat and sign up men who do not meet the corps' mental, moral and physical standards in order to get enough volunteers.

And a former recruit told the panel he tried to commit suicide because his learning disability and slowness made drill instructors in San Diego so angry that one threatened to kill him.

The former recruit, Ronald Bannister, 17, of Mill Valley, Calif., said a drill instructor threatened to dump him in San Diego Bay and report him absent without leave. He said drill instructors called him crazy when he was unable to do simple jobs like bringing them coffee.

Air Force school gets membership

The Community College of the Air Force (CCAF) is a full institutional member of the American Association of Community and Junior Colleges (AACJC).

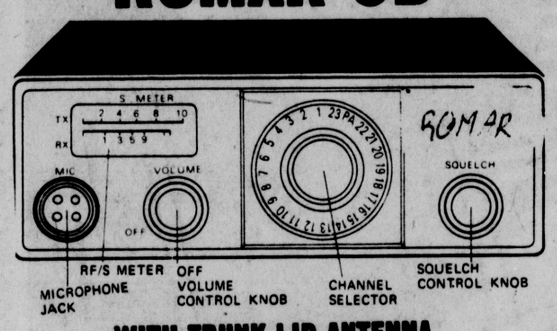

The significance of CCAF's admission is paramount because it is the only military member of the AACJC. Also, CCAF awards a Career Education Certificate (CEC) for satisfactory completion of its study program and not an associate degree.

Although CCAF awards the certificate in lieu of a degree, several nationally recognized educators have commented that the CEC study program is equal to many two-year programs in the nations leading colleges.

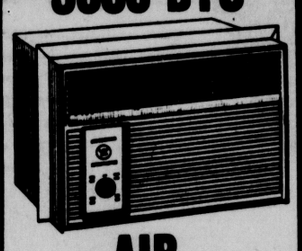

The CCAF is accredited by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools, Commission on Occupational Education Institutions, and by the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

Burlison "shoots tall" wins all the marbles

By TOM SEPPY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — A senator and seven House members have presented evidence that Congress hasn't lost all its marbles.

At the foot of the Capitol, Sen. J. Glenn Beall, R-Md., Mayor Peter Flaherty of Pittsburgh and the House group held their own Tuesday against the national boy and girl marbles champions and the national runners-up.

Rep. Bill D. Burlison, D-Mo., using what he calls his brown "shooting tall" marble, won three out of his four matches against the youngsters and then took top honors in the Congressional Marbles Tournament by beating Rep. Tom Railsback, R-Ill., 7-3.

Afterward, Burlison admitted it had been "20 or 30 years since I've shot marbles." But with tongue in cheek, he said, "Like all true champions it took a lot of concentration. It's like riding a bicycle. Once you learn when you're 6 or 7, you never forget."

In the finals against Railsback, Burlison showed the form of a true champion, knocking a marble out of the ring each time he shot. However, when asked to demonstrate his style for cameras he was unable to connect on three attempts.

The Congressmen and the marbles champions played a modified form of ringer, in which 13 aggies are placed in the center of a 10-foot ring. In the game Tuesday, the shooter knocking the most marbles out of the ring was declared the winner.

The congressmen had seven shots, allegedly because they were beginners, while the champions took only four.

The four semi-finalists were selected on the basis of the points they picked up while playing four matches against the boy and girl champions—Richard Usner, 15, of Pittsburgh, and Sharon Woolworth, 13, of Reading, Pa., and the runners-up, Jeff Rick of Cumberland, Md., and Jerilyn Keene of Baltimore.

Marbles-playing youngsters have competed in the national marbles championships every summer since 1922.

Also participating were Reps. Gus Yatron, William S. Moorhead and Gary A. Myers, all Pennsylvania Democrats. Mayor Flaherty was in Washington to talk to a bankers' meeting and showed up at the tournament because young Usner attends the same school as his son, Pete, in Pittsburgh.

Burlison "shoots tall" wins all the marbles

By TOM SEPPY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — A senator and seven House members have presented evidence that Congress hasn't lost all its marbles.

At the foot of the Capitol, Sen. J. Glenn Beall, R-Md., Mayor Peter Flaherty of Pittsburgh and the House group held their own Tuesday against the national boy and girl marbles champions and the national runners-up.

Rep. Bill D. Burlison, D-Mo., using what he calls his brown "shooting tall" marble, won three out of his four matches against the youngsters and then took top honors in the Congressional Marbles Tournament by beating Rep. Tom Railsback, R-Ill., 7-3.

Afterward, Burlison admitted it had been "20 or 30 years since I've shot marbles." But with tongue in cheek, he said, "Like all true champions it took a lot of concentration. It's like riding a bicycle. Once you learn when you're 6 or 7, you never forget."

In the finals against Railsback, Burlison showed the form of a true champion, knocking a marble out of the ring each time he shot. However, when asked to demonstrate his style for cameras he was unable to connect on three attempts.

The Congressmen and the marbles champions played a modified form of ringer, in which 13 aggies are placed in the center of a 10-foot ring. In the game Tuesday, the shooter knocking the most marbles out of the ring was declared the winner.

The congressmen had seven shots, allegedly because they were beginners, while the champions took only four.

The four semi-finalists were selected on the basis of the points they picked up while playing four matches against the boy and girl champions—Richard Usner, 15, of Pittsburgh, and Sharon Woolworth, 13, of Reading, Pa., and the runners-up, Jeff Rick of Cumberland, Md., and Jerilyn Keene of Baltimore.

Marbles-playing youngsters have competed in the national marbles championships every summer since 1922.

Also participating were Reps. Gus Yatron, William S. Moorhead and Gary A. Myers, all Pennsylvania Democrats. Mayor Flaherty was in Washington to talk to a bankers' meeting and showed up at the tournament because young Usner attends the same school as his son, Pete, in Pittsburgh.

Isn't It Painless?

Dental costs account for only 10 per cent of the $60 billion spent each year in the United States for private health care. That works out to less than $30 a year per person. The Conference Board, a nonpartisan research organization, notes that this low figure is not due to inexpensive costs but to a general lack of dental attention. More than 25 per cent of all Americans have never seen a dentist or haven't seen one for five years or more.

Malden approves bond for street, sewage improvements

MALDEN — The City Council has approved issuance of $300,000 in general obligation bonds to be used for extending city streets and improvements to the city's waterworks and sewage system.

The council reached the decision Monday, following consideration of several proposals presented by Norman Lewis of the Perry, Adams & Lewis bonding firm of Kansas City. Lewis told the council that this was an opportune time to issue the bonds and that the city would now pay only 5¾ per cent interest.

The bond issue was approved by Malden voters in a January 1975 referendum, and will not require an extra tax levy to retire the bonds.

In other business, the council agreed to study a plan calling for construction of a ramp, hand rails and casement windows at the Senior Citizens Service Center.

The council also enacted an ordinance stating that the city's fire trucks will not go outside the city limits to answer a fire call on any property belonging to someone who currently owes money to the fire department. The ordinance was passed in response to information indicating that many people outside the city limits have called the fire department of ight fires on their property and then refused to pay the resulting charges.

Mayor Sparrel Davis reappointed Mrs. Kent Wallace and Jennings G. Smith to three-year terms on the airport board and named Ed Miller and Bill Iverson to fill two-year terms.

Herb Pryer was reappointed to the Board of Public Works for a four-year term.

The council announced that no cleanup week will be held this year due to the high cost of dumping trash at the new landfill at Campbell.

Burlison to speak at Rec park opening

MALDEN — The Malden Recreation Park in the Industrial Park will hold opening ceremonies at 10 a.m. Saturday with 10th District Rep. Bill D. Burlison, D-Cape Girardeau, as guest speaker.

Burlison will make his second appearance on behalf of the recreation complex. He spoke at dedication ceremonies July 16, 1972.

The park has been constructed to provide numerous types of outdoor family entertainment — including golf, tennis, volleyball and softball. It also contains picnic areas and areas for "just relaxing."

Plans also include opening the swimming pool.

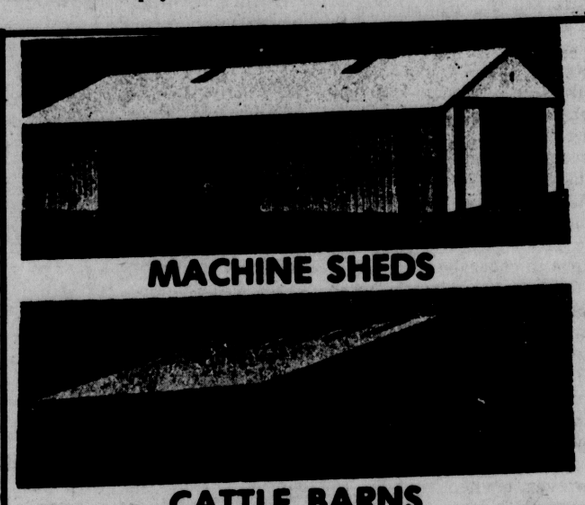

The recreation park committee planned the opening to provide safe family entertainment for area residents over Memorial Day weekend.

Dental costs account for only 10 per cent of the $60 billion spent each year in the United States for private health care. That works out to less than $30 a year per person. The Conference Board, a nonpartisan research organization, notes that this low figure is not due to inexpensive costs but to a general lack of dental attention. More than 25 per cent of all Americans have never seen a dentist or haven't seen one for five years or more.

Malden approves bond for street, sewage improvements

MALDEN — The City Council has approved issuance of $300,000 in general obligation bonds to be used for extending city streets and improvements to the city's waterworks and sewage system.

The council reached the decision Monday, following consideration of several proposals presented by Norman Lewis of the Perry, Adams & Lewis bonding firm of Kansas City. Lewis told the council that this was an opportune time to issue the bonds and that the city would now pay only 5¾ per cent interest.

The bond issue was approved by Malden voters in a January 1975 referendum, and will not require an extra tax levy to retire the bonds.

In other business, the council agreed to study a plan calling for construction of a ramp, hand rails and casement windows at the Senior Citizens Service Center.

The council also enacted an ordinance stating that the city's fire trucks will not go outside the city limits to answer a fire call on any property belonging to someone who currently owes money to the fire department. The ordinance was passed in response to information indicating that many people outside the city limits have called the fire department of ight fires on their property and then refused to pay the resulting charges.

Mayor Sparrel Davis reappointed Mrs. Kent Wallace and Jennings G. Smith to three-year terms on the airport board and named Ed Miller and Bill Iverson to fill two-year terms.

Herb Pryer was reappointed to the Board of Public Works for a four-year term.

The council announced that no cleanup week will be held this year due to the high cost of dumping trash at the new landfill at Campbell.

Burlison to speak at Rec park opening

MALDEN — The Malden Recreation Park in the Industrial Park will hold opening ceremonies at 10 a.m. Saturday with 10th District Rep. Bill D. Burlison, D-Cape Girardeau, as guest speaker.

Burlison will make his second appearance on behalf of the recreation complex. He spoke at dedication ceremonies July 16, 1972.

The park has been constructed to provide numerous types of outdoor family entertainment — including golf, tennis, volleyball and softball. It also contains picnic areas and areas for "just relaxing."

Plans also include opening the swimming pool.

The recreation park committee planned the opening to provide safe family entertainment for area residents over Memorial Day weekend.

High priority is given to nuclear control

By STUART SYMINGTON
United States Senator

WASHINGTON — In past Washington Reports columns, I have discussed what could be the gravest danger facing the world today -- the growing worldwide spread of nuclear technology and the materials from which nuclear weapons can be manufactured.

Unfortunately, some nuclear-supplying nations have expressed their indifference to this danger by exporting nuclear equipment and fuels without requing safeguards to ensure that these exports will not be used to make nuclear weapons.

In an effort to discouraged such unregulated sales, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee recently adopted an amendment I introduced to the Foreign Assistance Act of 1977 which, if enacted, would cut off American military and economic assistance to any country which delivers or receives nuclear reprocessing or enrichment equipment -- the means to make nuclear weapons -- without international safeguards and controls.

The provisions of this amendment would require: (1) that the supplier and recipient countries agree to place all transferred nuclear materials under international management to avoid control by the recipient nation alone, and (2) that the recipient nation agree to apply the safeguards of the International Atomic Energy Agency on all its nuclear facilities.

In effect, this amendment says to other nations, "If you wish to take the dangerous and costly steps necessary to develop nuclear weapons, you cannot expect the United States to help underwrite that effort, directly or indirectly.

Although the amendment would not solve the problem of nuclear proliferation, it does represent a firm and positive step. Enactment of the amendment would demonstrate that the United States gives high priority to the control of nuclear proliferation and is ready to reflect that priority in its policy decisions.

Aroused by the British threat to their homeland, southern Appalachian frontiersmen united to attack Cornwallis' army and accompanying American Tories on Oct. 7, 1780, at Kings Mountain, S.C. The success of the frontiersmen at Kings Mountain forced Cornwallis to withdraw from the area, placed him on the defensive, and delayed his northward march for three months, The World Almanac notes.

RAREST SHELLS FOUND IN STOMACHS OF FISH

GREENVILLE, Del. (AP) — Some of the world's rarest seashells come from the bellies of fish.

Enterprising collectors are finding the most-prized specimens by catching and opening shell-eating fish in South Africa, the Philippines and Brazil, according to Dr. R. Tucker Abbott, a conchologist — shell scientist — at the new Delaware Museum of Natural History here.

A report on ex pisces (out of fish) mollusks appears in "Kingdom of the Seashell," a book written by Dr. Abbott.

It reveals that shells removed from the stomachs of fish have brought an estimated $20,000 from collectors over a four-year period. Many of these ex pisces specimens are obtainable only from fish predators because they live in inaccessible shallow-water places.

Dexter to seek more housing units

DEXTER— The City of Dexter is "committed" to obtrain 50 more low income housing units, according to city and housing officials.

Mayor Willis Conner said the City is supporting efforts to obtain additional low rent housing, under a new private-money building program.

The mayor received a letter this week from Joseph A. Shepard, of the Joseph Alan Shepard and Associates, St. Louis, a firm that is building low rent housing under the new federal program.

Shepard said he was "grateful that the city is committed to obtain more low rent housing. It is only with this complete commitment that it will be possible to persuade HUD and the Missouri Housing Development Commission that Dexter should be allocted additional units."

The recently developed housing program enables private builders to construct low rent housing, similar to the federally-built units already in north Dexter, though the housing would be under the control of the Dexter Housing Authority. Howard Chrisman is chairman of the local Housing Authority and is working with the mayor on this project.

Shepard said: "At this stage of processing I will need two things from you right away.

"The first is a letter from the city stating (1) that the city fully supports this proposal; (2) that the project and location is in complete conformance with your city housing plan; and (3) that the zoning will permit 50 units on six acres at the Cox location."

The Dexter Zoning Commission has scheduled a meeting to discuss the proposed 50 units of low rent housing, and a final decision on the project should be forthcoming in a few weeks, Conner said.

Congressman feels Hays should resign

WASHINGTON (AP) — A congressman told the House today that Rep. Wayne L. Hays should quit as chairman of its Administration Committee and resign from the chamber to help restore its prestige.

"Something dramatic has to be done," declared Rep. Romano L. Mazzoli, D-Ky. "I don't think we can wait for the ethics committee to act."

Hays was not in the chamber at the time. Rep. Martin A. Russo, D-Ill., challenged Mazzoli's remarks, calling it a terrible statement. But some Republicans applauded Mazzoli's speech.

Mazzoli spoke as Hays' friends and supporters collected evidence that they say shows Elizabeth Ray was a competent office worker who performed clerical and secretarial duties for her $14,000 congressional salary.

Miss Ray was removed earlier this week from her job as a clerk for the Administration Committee after she said she earned her salary by serving as Hays' mistress. Hays has admitted a relationship with her, but he denied that she was paid from public funds only to satisfy his sexual desires.

In separate interviews with The Associated Press on Wednesday, Hays accused Miss Ray of blackmailing him, and Miss Ray countered that she had received nothing from the Ohio Democrat except a sweater, occasional money for dinner, one month's rent on her apartment and a plane ticket to Florida for Christmas.

Mazzoli said his statement to the House was difficult to make, just as Hays had said his admission to the House that he had a relationship with Miss Ray was difficult.

"Some might call this a cheap shot ..." Mazzoli declared, but "I believe the time has come for Chairman Hays to resign from his chairmanship and from the House."

Mazzoli said that at a recent news conference in his Kentucky district the first question he was asked was: "How many more members have mistresses on their staffs?"

Russo replied: "I'm sick and tired of politicians being considered guilty until proved innocent." He said the impression should not be given that there is widespread corruption in the House.

Miss Ray contended she was unable to do office work and that she was hired only because she was sexually involved with Hays. But aides and supporters of Hays were gathering samples of what they said would show that Miss Ray was capable of doing office work for her salary.

Meanwhile, the Washington Post said in today's editions that a federal grand jury has begun hearing testimony about Miss Ray's position with the Hays committee.

The Justice Department refused comment. Quoting informed sources, the Post said the grand jury was asked to consider whether Hays' relationship with Miss Ray might have involved violations of federal laws covering conspiracies to defraud the government or to convert tax funds to personal use.

The Washington Star said federal prosecutors have subpoenaed witnesses to appear before the grand jury soon. The Star said its source would not say whether the subpoenas were issued for Hays or Miss Ray. It said other subpoenas were issued for records and documents.

The Star also said:

—Relatives of seven members of Congress have been employed on the committee or subcommittee staffs of the Administration Committee, Five are still working there. In addition, Hays' daughter and niece are employed by committee members.

The relatives or spokesmen for the offices where they work told the Star they were not hired because of their congressional connections. They are among 276 persons working on the committee and subcommittee staffs. It is illegal for a member of Congress to hire a relative, but legal for another member to hire that relative.

DEXTER— The City of Dexter is "committed" to obtain 50 more low income housing units, according to city and housing officials.

Mayor Willis Conner said the City is supporting efforts to obtain additional low rent housing, under a new private-money building program.

The mayor received a letter this week from Joseph A. Shepard, of the Joseph Alan Shepard and Associates, St. Louis, a firm that is building low rent housing under the new federal program.

Shepard said he was "grateful that the city is committed to obtain more low rent housing. It is only with this complete commitment that it will be possible to persuade HUD and the Missouri Housing Development Commission that Dexter should be allocted additional units."

The recently developed housing program enables private builders to construct low rent housing, similar to the federally-built units already in north Dexter, though the housing would be under the control of the Dexter Housing Authority. Howard Chrisman is chairman of the local Housing Authority and is working with the mayor on this project.

Shepard said: "At this stage of processing I will need two things from you right away.

"The first is a letter from the city stating (1) that the city fully supports this proposal; (2) that the project and location is in complete conformance with your city housing plan; and (3) that the zoning will permit 50 units on six acres at the Cox location."

The Dexter Zoning Commission has scheduled a meeting to discuss the proposed 50 units of low rent housing, and a final decision on the project should be forthcoming in a few weeks, Conner said.

Congressman feels Hays should resign

WASHINGTON (AP) — A congressman told the House today that Rep. Wayne L. Hays should quit as chairman of its Administration Committee and resign from the chamber to help restore its prestige.

"Something dramatic has to be done," declared Rep. Romano L. Mazzoli, D-Ky. "I don't think we can wait for the ethics committee to act."

Hays was not in the chamber at the time. Rep. Martin A. Russo, D-Ill., challenged Mazzoli's remarks, calling it a terrible statement. But some Republicans applauded Mazzoli's speech.

Mazzoli spoke as Hays' friends and supporters collected evidence that they say shows Elizabeth Ray was a competent office worker who performed clerical and secretarial duties for her $14,000 congressional salary.

Miss Ray was removed earlier this week from her job as a clerk for the Administration Committee after she said she earned her salary by serving as Hays' mistress. Hays has admitted a relationship with her, but he denied that she was paid from public funds only to satisfy his sexual desires.

In separate interviews with The Associated Press on Wednesday, Hays accused Miss Ray of blackmailing him, and Miss Ray countered that she had received nothing from the Ohio Democrat except a sweater, occasional money for dinner, one month's rent on her apartment and a plane ticket to Florida for Christmas.

Mazzoli said his statement to the House was difficult to make, just as Hays had said his admission to the House that he had a relationship with Miss Ray was difficult.

"Some might call this a cheap shot ..." Mazzoli declared, but "I believe the time has come for Chairman Hays to resign from his chairmanship and from the House."

Mazzoli said that at a recent news conference in his Kentucky district the first question he was asked was: "How many more members have mistresses on their staffs?"

Russo replied: "I'm sick and tired of politicians being considered guilty until proved innocent." He said the impression should not be given that there is widespread corruption in the House.

Miss Ray contended she was unable to do office work and that she was hired only because she was sexually involved with Hays. But aides and supporters of Hays were gathering samples of what they said would show that Miss Ray was capable of doing office work for her salary.

Meanwhile, the Washington Post said in today's editions that a federal grand jury has begun hearing testimony about Miss Ray's position with the Hays committee.

The Justice Department refused comment. Quoting informed sources, the Post said the grand jury was asked to consider whether Hays' relationship with Miss Ray might have involved violations of federal laws covering conspiracies to defraud the government or to convert tax funds to personal use.

The Washington Star said federal prosecutors have subpoenaed witnesses to appear before the grand jury soon. The Star said its source would not say whether the subpoenas were issued for Hays or Miss Ray. It said other subpoenas were issued for records and documents.

The Star also said:

—Relatives of seven members of Congress have been employed on the committee or subcommittee staffs of the Administration Committee, Five are still working there. In addition, Hays' daughter and niece are employed by committee members.

The relatives or spokesmen for the offices where they work told the Star they were not hired because of their congressional connections. They are among 276 persons working on the committee and subcommittee staffs. It is illegal for a member of Congress to hire a relative, but legal for another member to hire that relative.

Bulldog unity carries them into state semifinals tomorrow at Ste. Genevieve

By DALE FORBIS

It was, needless to say, a happy car ride home from Eureka last Saturday afternoon as Dale Forbis, sportswriter and fan, had the "opportunity" to provide transportation home for four members of the Sikeston baseball team. Wins over Lebanon and Eureka had assured Sikeston of only its second trip to the state finals since 1950 and the young men wanted to talk. About baseball, right? Wrong, sort of.

It seems Bill Hampton, Garry Griffin, Juaken Dumas, Glen Alexander and their teammates spent a portion of Friday night savoring their 13-2 win over Lebanon in a movie theatre, watching a show about the "Bad News Bears," or some such stuff. The show as about little league baseball and was so funny that Sikeston forgot to be nervous against Eureka the following afternoon and squeezed out a 5-4 win.

Of course, players like Juaken "Indian" Dumas and Jeff "Hawk" Limbaugh usually give the illusion, at least, that nothing in the world would shake them, anyway. It was Hawk's long double to right that won Saturday's championship game, and that wasn't the first time the tall, gangly hotcorner man of the Bulldogs has come through in the pinch.

But, despite the late-inning heroics of Limbaugh and the obvious and impressive talents of David Shell, Dale Deal and Ricky Taylor, there are other, deeper joys to be enjoyed while one, even a sportswriter, watches this bunch play baseball.

"I think," I was saying to a half-listening companion, "I know why Sikeston has been so successful."

"Unh," he said, and I took this as encouragement to lay my profound observation upon him.

"There aren't any malcontents (This isn't the word I used, but that word isn't suitable for print in a small-town newspaper.) There is no one totally concerned with himself and not anyone else."

"When these guys pull for a teammate, they really mean it."

I don't know whether his grunt indicated agreement or total disinterest --- he wasn't a baseball fan, just a friend---but I felt a spreading glow. I had arrived at the item that made this team so special. They aren't the best fielding team in the business and there are no 95-mile an hour fastballs coming from the mound when a Sikeston pitcher is out there, but this tremendous team spirit is what they have drawn on to stay in each game and come so far against talented opposition.

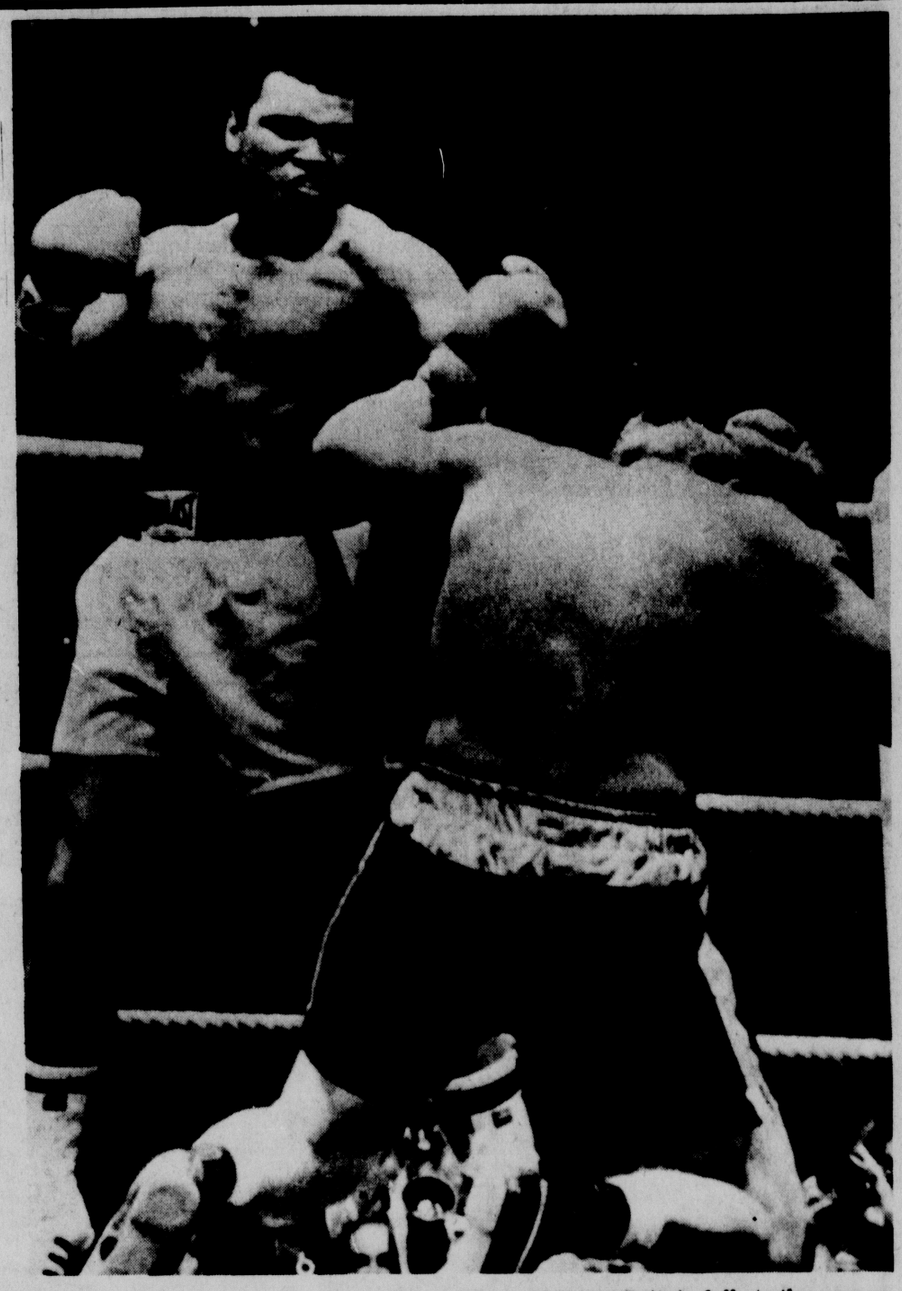

"If you can teach a group of young men fundamentals," explains coach Mac, "you can play with anybody and they won't embarrass you."

His record speaks for the correctness of the theory. The Bulldog team this year, as in every year, seems to know where the ball should go on every play and rarely hurts itself with a mental error. Mechanical errors will happen, but through constant on-the-field communication between the players and with their coach, dumb mistakes usually don't plague them.

When Sikeston arrives at Ste. Genevieve Friday there is more than a good possibility that they will be considered the least impressive of the four teams there. But, the banding together of individual spirits into a solid, unified team is almost visible to the observer who has been with the team all year long. Going back to what was pointed out before, everyone pulls for everyone else, and it isn't little league, rah-rah stuff. If you ask any team member they surely will tell you, "Yeah, we've really got something special."

The following the Sikeston team has received this season hasn't been overwhelming, but those that have attended have been very dependable and even more vocal. Only now, with just two games left, has the town of Sikeston has suddenly awakened to the accomplishments of this unassuming and close-knit bunch of athletes. Maybe this town which is renowned for its support of athletic teams will make up for the baseball Bulldogs' neglect with two fine showings this coming weekend.

It would be nothing more than what they deserve.

Ali, Inoki may need rulebook

TOKYO (AP) — The June 26 match between world heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali and pro wrestler Antonio Inoki may give rise to a new sport: trying to understand the rules of their contest.

Officials in Inoki's camp Wednesday announced the battle's regulations, which often read like a student's multiple-choice examination.

One rule says that the referee may separate the pair only if they get tangled in the ropes. The action then would resume in the middle of the ring.

If a contestant is thrown out of the ring, he has 20 seconds to return before being counted out. But a man also could be beaten if his shoulders are pinned to the mat for a count of three, if he is knocked out for a count of 10, or when his corner concedes he is hurt too badly to continue.

The equipment also is free choice. The fighters may wear boxing shorts or wrestling tights; boxing shoes or bare feet; four-ounce boxing gloves or karate protective gloves or any reasonable modification of that gear. Or they may fight bare fisted.

Ali has a choice of wearing two-inch gauze with one-inch tape wrappings on his hands if he desires.

Brett misses no-hitter again

ANAHEIM (AP) — Ken Brett hasn't been with the Chicago White Sox long enough to think about a regular starting job, let alone a no-hitter.

But the left-handed pitcher known for his hitting came within a few inches of fame in only his second start with Chicago.

Brett mowed down 23 California players, gave up a walk, and had two out in the ninth Wednesday night before a strange occurrance took away his shot at glory.

As it turned out, a scratch single by Angel second baseman Jerry Remy didn't affect the outcome, Chicago's 1-0, 11-inning triumph. All it did was keep a frustrated Brett from a no-hitter that was "in the bag."

"This isn't the first time," said the 27-year-old, Brooklyn-born, California-reared and Boston-educated hurler who wound up with a two-hitter in 10 innings of work. "Two years ago in Pittsburgh I had eight perfect innings against San Diego, but I relaxed too much and Fred Kendall — who I've known all my life — sliced a slider for a base hit. So I've come close before."

He was one out away before Remy checked his swing and rolled one down to third baseman Jorge Orta. Orta, a converted outfielder, dashed over but the ball went underneath his glove — by mere inches — and the official scorer ruled it a hit.

"If that's a hit, I'm bleep, bleep, bleep. It's a brutal call. If this is Chicago, it's an error," Brett said.

WE HONOR

If your old cap can't take the pressure, get ours. Free.

We'll mail you a free PRESTONE Radiator Pressure Cap for proof of purchase from 2 gallons of PRESTONE II® Coolant.

What's so important about a radiator cap?

Pressure.

If your radiator cap is more than two years old, chances are it's already lost its ability to hold full pressure in your cooling system.

And that means your car's coolant will be forced to lower its boiling point. Result: possible boilover.

Corrosion causes boilovers too.

Corrosion can clog your car's radiator and coolant jacket. It can perforate tiny holes in your radiator and coolant pump that let your precious coolant leak away.

That's where PRESTONE II comes in.

PRESTONE II Coolant, with its patented silicone-silicate formula, bonds a protective film to all the metals in your cooling system.

So it helps prevent corrosion buildup, and fights boilovers too.

How often should you change your coolant?

Some people think coolant can stay in the system for year after year of driving. It can't. Because over time, the vital rust and corrosion inhibitors wear out.

To avoid corrosion buildup, we recommend a thorough flushing of the cooling system and a fresh fill of PRESTONE II every year (2 gallons for most cars), in a 50-50 mix with water.

That solution, combined with 15 lbs. of pressure on the system, raises the boiling point of your coolant to 265°F.

Send for free Cooling System Handbook.

Our free booklet will give you valuable information about corrosion, your cooling system, and how to install your PRESTONE II Coolant. To get the handbook, and to get your free PRESTONE Radiator Pressure Cap, see the coupon below —and send it in now.

WE HONOR BANKAMERICARD

Free.

We'll mail you a free PRESTONE Radiator Pressure Cap for proof of purchase from 2 gallons of PRESTONE II® Coolant.

What's so important about a radiator cap?

Pressure.

If your radiator cap is more than two years old, chances are it's already lost its ability to hold full pressure in your cooling system.

And that means your car's coolant will be forced to lower its boiling point. Result: possible boilover.

Corrosion causes boilovers too.

Corrosion can clog your car's radiator and coolant jacket. It can perforate tiny holes in your radiator and coolant pump that let your precious coolant leak away.

That's where PRESTONE II comes in.

PRESTONE II Coolant, with its patented silicone-silicate formula, bonds a protective film to all the metals in your cooling system.

So it helps prevent corrosion buildup, and fights boilovers too.

How often should you change your coolant?

Some people think coolant can stay in the system for year after year of driving. It can't. Because over time, the vital rust and corrosion inhibitors wear out.

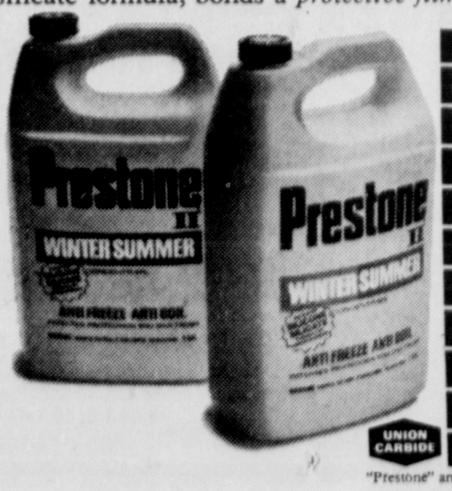

To avoid corrosion buildup, we recommend a thorough flushing of the cooling system and a fresh fill of PRESTONE II every year (2 gallons for most cars), in a 50-50 mix with water.

That solution, combined with 15 lbs. of pressure on the system, raises the boiling point of your coolant to 265°F.

Send for free Cooling System Handbook.

Our free booklet will give you valuable information about corrosion, your cooling system, and how to install your PRESTONE II Coolant. To get the handbook, and to get your free PRESTONE Radiator Pressure Cap, see the coupon below —and send it in now.

Redbirds fall to Chicago 4-2

Reuschel does it all for Cubs

CHICAGO (AP) — "Sometimes the ball works for you, sometimes it doesn't," said Rick Reuschel, after the ball worked well enough for him to do a little bit of everything and lead the Chicago Cubs to a 4-2 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Reuschel, 4-3, collected his third straight victory Wednesday with 7 1-3 innings of work, gave up just four hits, drove in what proved to be the winning run and scored an insurance run in a game which lifted the Cubs out of the National League East basement and dropped the Cards into it.

The Cubs opened with a run in the first off loser John Denny, 3-4, who had not given up an earned run in 18 consecutive innings before Wednesday. He walked Rick Monday to lead off the inning before Jose Cardenal singled to right for the first of his three hits in the game, including his fifth home run of the season. Monday moved to third on the hit and scored on Bill Madlock's ground ball.

Cardenal's solo homer in the third put the Cubs ahead 2-0. It stayed that way until the seventh when Reggie Smith smacked his fifth home run of the year off the foul pole in right field to bring the Cards within one.

But then came Reuschel's heroics in the Cubs' half of the seventh. Mick Kelleher led off with a double and took third when Denny threw wild to second on a pickoff attempt. When Reuschel singled him home on a drive between short and third, Denny was lifted for reliever Mike Wallace.

Wallace walked Monday and was replaced by Bill Greif, who got the first out of the inning when Cardenal's grounder forced Monday at second but moved Reuschel to third.

Madlock then fouled out to catcher Ted Simmons but Cardenal tagged up and took second on the play. Simmons threw to second baseman Mike Tyson in an attempt to get Cardenal and Reuschel took off for home. Tyson's throw to the plate hit Reuschel in the shin as he slid safely across for Chicago's final run.

The Cards got their other run in the eighth when Keith Hernandez drove a pinch-hit double down the first base line and scored on Lou Brock's single off Darold Knowles, who relieved Reuschel after he was hit on Tyson's throw. Knowles went the rest of the way to pick up his fourth save of the year.

Eagles, Nowell are Babe Ruth winners

Baseball fans visiting the Sikeston Recreational Complex saw a little of everything in the Junior Babe Ruth League action played last night. In the opener, the Eagles squeezed by IBEW 3-1 in a well-pitched contest. On the other side of the coin, Nowell Real Estate outslugged Harts Bread 16-15 in a wild nightcap.

Rogers singled in the top of the first and scored on Pollard's basehit to put IBEW ahead but the Eagles bounced back with a pair in the bottom of the frame. Garner temporarily lost his control on the mound for IBEW and issued three walks, which, along with a hit and an error, gave the Eagles a 2-1 lead. The Eagles made it 3-1 in the second when Launium singled to drive in Burchfield. Both hurlers pitched shutout baseball the rest of the way as the Eagles made their lead stand up.

Eddie Wasson was the winner for the EAgles. Wasson settled down after the shaky start to allow only two hits over the final four innings. Wasson had to pitch around four errors by his teammates.

In the second game, the action started early. Harts broke the game wide open with four runs in the first and five more in the second to take a 9-0 lead and were on top 11-2 after three innings. But Nowell then began to whittle away at the lead with a pair of tallies in the fourth. Harts still held a commanding 12-4 lead going into the sixth, but Nowell exploded for twelve runs in the top of the inning to go ahead. Five hits and eight walks enabled Nowell to bat around twice during the uprising and make the score 16-12 going into the bottom of the sixth. Harts came back and nearly tied it with three runs to bring the final score to 16-15. The game was called after the sixth due to the league's time limit.

Blankenship gets Cardinal tryout

Bobby Blankenship, a recent graduate of Missouri Southern-Joplin and former Sikeston High School pitcher, has been invited by the St. Louis Cardinals for a special tryout at Busch Stadium on June 17.

Blankenship, who is pitching this summer for the Siketon Saints, is one of a select few to be invited, a distinct honor no matter what the result.

The talented 22-year old has attained his success by using excellent crontrol of his pitches, a sharp-breaking curve and hard fastball, to keep ahead of the hitters and in control of the game. He recorded a 5-1 record in college play this year and a 19-4 career mark.

Reuschel does it all for Cubs

CHICAGO (AP) — "Sometimes the ball works for you, sometimes it doesn't," said Rick Reuschel, after the ball worked well enough for him to do a little bit of everything and lead the Chicago Cubs to a 4-2 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Eagles, Nowell are Babe Ruth winners

Baseball fans visiting the Sikeston Recreational Complex saw a little of everything in the Junior Babe Ruth League action played last night. In the opener, the Eagles squeezed by IBEW 3-1 in a well-pitched contest. On the other side of the coin, Nowell Real Estate outslugged Harts Bread 16-15 in a wild nightcap.

Rogers singled in the top of the first and scored on Pollard's basehit to put IBEW ahead but the Eagles bounced back with a pair in the bottom of the frame. Garner temporarily lost his control on the mound for IBEW and issued three walks, which, along with a hit and an error, gave the Eagles a 2-1 lead. The Eagles made it 3-1 in the second when Launium singled to drive in Burchfield. Both hurlers pitched shutout baseball the rest of the way as the Eagles made their lead stand up.

Eddie Wasson was the winner for the EAgles. Wasson settled down after the shaky start to allow only two hits over the final four innings. Wasson had to pitch around four errors by his teammates.

In the second game, the action started early. Harts broke the game wide open with four runs in the first and five more in the second to take a 9-0 lead and were on top 11-2 after three innings. But Nowell then began to whittle away at the lead with a pair of tallies in the fourth. Harts still held a commanding 12-4 lead going into the sixth, but Nowell exploded for twelve runs in the top of the inning to go ahead. Five hits and eight walks enabled Nowell to bat around twice during the uprising and make the score 16-12 going into the bottom of the sixth. Harts came back and nearly tied it with three runs to bring the final score to 16-15. The game was called after the sixth due to the league's time limit. (16)

Blankenship gets Cardinal tryout

Bobby Blankenship, a recent graduate of Missouri Southern-Joplin and former Sikeston High School pitcher, has been invited by the St. Louis Cardinals for a special tryout at Busch Stadium on June 17.

Blankenship, who is pitching this summer for the Siketon Saints, is one of a select few to be invited, a distinct honor no matter what the result.

The talented 22-year old has attained his success by using excellent crontrol of his pitches, a sharp-breaking curve and hard fastball, to keep ahead of the hitters and in control of the game. He recorded a 5-1 record in college play this year and a 19-4 career mark.

Berrys of Malden build doghouses to ward off "jimmy-jams"

By FRANK WATSON

MALDEN— Sometimes 66-year-old John Berry of Malden gets what he calls the "jimmy-majs." He wants to get back to the farm. Sitting on a metal lawn chair on a concrete porch, wearing slightly faded overalls, he talks of the farm life.

"Boy, I liked that farming," he says, as cars whizz by on Highway 25. "Until I retired I only missed onehalf of a growing season from a kid on up. I got up to be a big teen-ager and I thought I'd like to do something else, but it didn't suit me. I went back to the farm. I've put up many a row of cotton, corn, beans, wheat. I'd rather do it yet than what I'm doing."

Weakened by illness, he finally had to retire in 1969. His doctor asked him what he was going to do since he could no longer farm but needed to remain active.

His answer is the subject of this story.

Build doghouses.

"I had some good lumber that kept getting in my way," he explains. "I said I was going to make a porch swing and see if it'd sell. You know, then everybody wanted one. So a guy asked me if I could build a doghouse. So I built one, and it started the same way."

Soon after retiring, he got the jimmy-jams so bad that he would walk from one corner of the room to another, trying to think of something to do.

"I know what I wanted to do," he says, "I wanted to get back to the farm. But I couldn't. I couldn't even take care of the odds and ends. I worked all my life, and when I came to town, I couldn't stay still."

He estimates that he has made about 225 dog houses and about 185 porch swings in the last five years.

His wife Estell has also made about 175 of the small houses. Except all of the houses were not that small.

Sitting on the porch, she remembers that one went to St. Louis that was as "big as a chicken house." It was for a St. Bernard.

She said houses built by her and her husband have gone to Tennessee, Kentucky, Illinois, Portageville, Kennett, Dexter, Bloomfield, St. Louis and all over Malden.

Berry is a frail looking man, weighing only about 90 pounds as a result of his bouts with illness, which led to Mrs. Berry's involvement in canine domicile contracting.

"She said to me one day she wished she could make one," Berry says, glancing at his wife. "I said, 'You can.' I had a bunch of good lumber out there, and I told her if you want to make some just go out there and go at it."

"There's work to it," Mrs. Berry said. "It's not so hard, but you got to stay with it. It takes longer than you think it would just to look at them."

It takes a good day with good lumber; more if the lumber isn't that good.

"I've seen a time when I could make one in half a day," Berry added, "when I was younger." But now two hours at a time is about all he can handle before he has to rest, "and if I don't start to mend I may have to give it up altogether," he added.

Mrs. Berry, who is 63 years old, may also have to quit the profitable hobby, because she has arthritis in her hands, and it is getting harder for her to do the work.

The Berrys, who have been married for 46 years, have seven sons and one daughter. One son farms the same land Berry farmed much of his life.

Both say the government checks they get will not pay for all the necessities, including the medicine each must take, but they do not want to have to depend on their children.

Mr. & Mrs. Berry

Mr. and Mrs. John Berry of Malden sit on their front porch and discuss their profitable hobby--building dog houses. The work keeps them busy and brings in some extra money.

Doghouses

These are just a few of the hundreds of dog houses that Mr. and Mrs. John Berry of Malden say they have made over the past five years. They are part of a display in their front yard.

Berrys of Malden build doghouses to ward off "jimmy-jams"

By FRANK WATSON

MALDEN— Sometimes 66-year-old John Berry of Malden gets what he calls the "jimmy-majs." He wants to get back to the farm. Sitting on a metal lawn chair on a concrete porch, wearing slightly faded overalls, he talks of the farm life.

"Boy, I liked that farming," he says, as cars whizz by on Highway 25. "Until I retired I only missed onehalf of a growing season from a kid on up. I got up to be a big teen-ager and I thought I'd like to do something else, but it didn't suit me. I went back to the farm. I've put up many a row of cotton, corn, beans, wheat. I'd rather do it yet than what I'm doing."

Weakened by illness, he finally had to retire in 1969. His doctor asked him what he was going to do since he could no longer farm but needed to remain active.

His answer is the subject of this story.

Build doghouses.

"I had some good lumber that kept getting in my way," he explains. "I said I was going to make a porch swing and see if it'd sell. You know, then everybody wanted one. So a guy asked me if I could build a doghouse. So I built one, and it started the same way."

Soon after retiring, he got the jimmy-jams so bad that he would walk from one corner of the room to another, trying to think of something to do.

"I know what I wanted to do," he says, "I wanted to get back to the farm. But I couldn't. I couldn't even take care of the odds and ends. I worked all my life, and when I came to town, I couldn't stay still."

He estimates that he has made about 225 dog houses and about 185 porch swings in the last five years.

His wife Estell has also made about 175 of the small houses. Except all of the houses were not that small.

Sitting on the porch, she remembers that one went to St. Louis that was as "big as a chicken house." It was for a St. Bernard.

She said houses built by her and her husband have gone to Tennessee, Kentucky, Illinois, Portageville, Kennett, Dexter, Bloomfield, St. Louis and all over Malden.

Berry is a frail looking man, weighing only about 90 pounds as a result of his bouts with illness, which led to Mrs. Berry's involvement in canine domicile contracting.

"She said to me one day she wished she could make one," Berry says, glancing at his wife. "I said, 'You can.' I had a bunch of good lumber out there, and I told her if you want to make some just go out there and go at it."

"There's work to it," Mrs. Berry said. "It's not so hard, but you got to stay with it. It takes longer than you think it would just to look at them."

It takes a good day with good lumber; more if the lumber isn't that good.

"I've seen a time when I could make one in half a day," Berry added, "when I was younger." But now two hours at a time is about all he can handle before he has to rest, "and if I don't start to mend I may have to give it up altogether," he added.

Mrs. Berry, who is 63 years old, may also have to quit the profitable hobby, because she has arthritis in her hands, and it is getting harder for her to do the work.

The Berrys, who have been married for 46 years, have seven sons and one daughter. One son farms the same land Berry farmed much of his life.

Both say the government checks they get will not pay for all the necessities, including the medicine each must take, but they do not want to have to depend on their children.

Mr. & Mrs. Berry

Mr. and Mrs. John Berry of Malden sit on their front porch and discuss their profitable hobby--building dog houses. The work keeps them busy and brings in some extra money.

Doghouses

These are just a few of the hundreds of dog houses that Mr. and Mrs. John Berry of Malden say they have made over the past five years. They are part of a display in their front yard.

On this date:

In 1860, a force under the Italian patriot, Giuseppe Garibaldi, invaded Sicily and captured the city of Palermo.

In 1905, a Japanese naval force wiped out a Russian fleet of 32 ships. In 1936, the British luxury liner, Queen Mary, began its maiden trans-Atlantic voyage.

In 1937, the Golden Gate Bridge across San Francisco Bay was opened.

In 1954, more than 100 crewmen were killed in an explosion aboard the U.S. aircraft carrier Bennington off Rhode Island.

In 1964, Indian Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru died in New Delhi.

Ten years ago: Fidel Castro ordered a state of alert for the armed forces in Cuba, charging U.S. provocations.

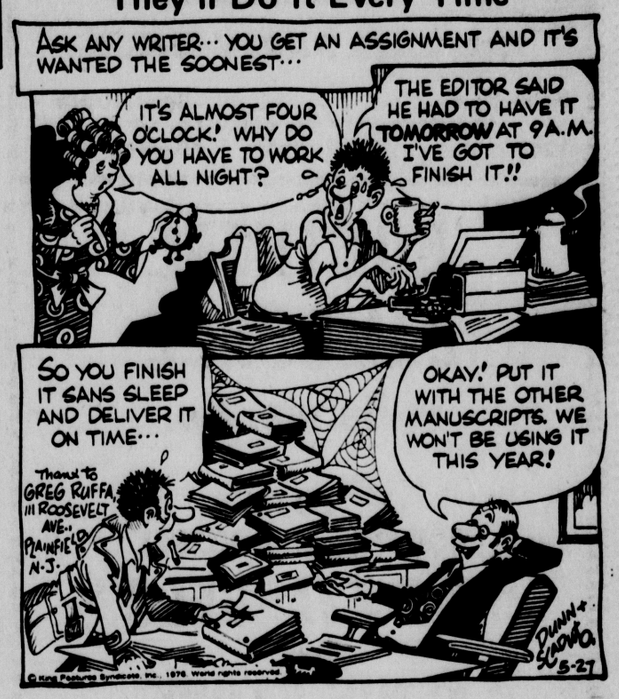

Five years ago: The Soviet Union signed a 15-year pact with Egypt, pledging assistance in the recovery of all Arab territories occupied by Israel.

One year ago: The United States agreed to end its aid program in the Indochina kingdom of Laos.

Today's birthdays: Secretary of State Henry Kissinger is 53. Democratic Senator Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota is 65.

Thought for today: The pursuit of truth shall set you free — even if you never catch up with it — Clarence Darrow, American lawyer, 1857-1938.

What's the law?

The case of the fleeing victim

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Marvin and two friends were walking down the street one night when they were suddenly accosted by three knife-wielding villains. and, while Marvin and company had an ample supply of muscles between them, the ones they relied on were in their legs.

Dashing cross the roadway in front of Mr. Wimple's oncoming automobile, with Marvin bring up the rear, Marvin and his two friends raced toward the apparent security of a group of men walking on the other side of the street.

Unfortunately, while Marvin's two buddies made it safely past Mr. Wimple's oncoming car, high- steppling Marvin was less fortunate. He was struck by Mr. Wimple's automobile and he sued Mr. Wimple for his injuries.

"The accident wasn't my fault," insisted Mr. Wimple in court. "Marvin ran in front of my car."

"I had no choice," was Marvin's answer. "Had I stayed where I was, I might have been sliced up like a pickle. Since Mr. Wimple didn't hit my friends with his car, he shouldn't have hit me either."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you make Mr. Wimple pay for hitting high- stepping Marvin?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! The judge held that, since Marvin's two friends had passed in front of Mr. Wimple's automobile, Mr. Wimple should have been able to see Marvin in time to stop his car and avoid hitting him. As for Marvin's having raced in front of the car, concluded the judge, a person's actions can be excused when they are due to a sudden peril, are not caused by him, and when the situation might reasonably be calculated to distract his attention from the care he might otherwise be required to exercise for his own safety.

Brinkley to present 'Pursuit of Happiness'

NEW YORK (AP) — David Brinkley, having perused American life and liberty, concludes NBC's bicentennial trilogy of specials tonight with a 90-minute effort called "The Pursuit of Happiness."

Its aim is simple. It sets out to examine if Americans are happy and what makes them happy. With the aid of author-interviewer Studs Terkel, it criss-crosses the nation in pursuit of the answers.

Granted, "The Pursuit of Happiness" is one of those topics that causes kids to groan when ordered to write a composition about it in English class.

Financial burdens of college reportedly has gone down

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Contrary to the popular impression, the average financial burden for a family with children in college has gone down in the past four decades, according to a report from the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching.

In an analysis of state support for higher education released Wednesday, the foundation reports that the actual financial burden has declined about two-thirds since 1929-1930.

"This does not correspond with the impression that families have over the years been carrying heavier and heavier burdens, on the average, for the higher education of their children," the report states.

"It is the taxpayers who have done that — for the children of their own and the children of others."

The report added, however, that high-income families with children who don't qualify for tuition assistance and who attend expensive private universities are indeed facing a greater financial burden.

The foundation concludes that states now and in the future will play a more important role in the support and development of higher education institutions.

"(State support) has risen constantly over the years except during World War II," the foundation said. It noted that state and local expenditures on higher education have now reached 1.09 per cent of personal income — exceeding the 1 percent level recommended by the Carnegie Commission on Higher Education in 1971.

Conversely, the foundation found that "the federal government is now reducing commitments or completing programs already undertaken and appears to be less interested than it was a decade ago in starting major new initiatives in higher education."

According to the study, 17 states have excess teacher training capabilities. They include: Kansas,Missouri, Nebraska and Oklahoma.

Sixteen states which might want to reassess their facilities for offering Ph.D programs include Missouri.

More than half the states need to re-evaluate the number of places available at low or no cost to high school graduates because a deficit of such places may be imminent, the report said. They include Iowa.

Support of public research universities has declined in the past 15 years in many states, the report said, citing as Kansas as an example.

The lengthy report rates each state on four criteria — effort, concern, competitive position of higher education, and fiscal capacity to support higher education.

"Effort" is represented by percentage of state pesonal income spent on higher education by state and local education, the foundation says. "Concern," it says, is measured by expenditures per fulltime equivalent student in public institutions.

Eagleton says Carter did 'as good as expected'

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The leader of Missouri's Democrats says the state's 28 pledged delegates to the presidential candidacy of Jimmy Carter were "as good as could be expected."

U.S. Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton made that comment Wednesday after predictions that Carter would collect at least 40 of the 54 delegates during Missouri congressional district meetings the night before failed to materialize.

"The battle lines were whether Mr. X, Mr. Y or Mrs. Z go to the convention," Eagleton said in a telephone interview from his Washington, D.C. office. "People didn't care under whose tent they wanted to go."

The senator led the 34 party leaders who moved from an uncommitted stance to a position supporting the former Georgia governor's candidacy earlier this month. The 34 said the switch would bring at least 40 of the 54 delegates chosen during Missouri's 10 congressional district meetings Tuesday night into Carter's camp.

And while the 28 were good enough to give Carter 52 per cent of the state's delegate strength, 21 remained uncommitted with the rest being divided among three other candidates.

Missouri will send a 71-member delegation—the largest of the 21 states not holding a primary—to the Democratic National Convention in New York in July. Fifty-four of the delgates were selected Tuesday night, with the remaining 17 to be chose at the state convention June 12.

Before the May 13 endorsement of Carter's candidacy, two-thirds of the delegates selected during township, ward and county meetings were uncommitted, with Carter getting only 17 per cent. The endorsement came after Eagleton met with Carter May 11 in Washington, D.C.

Rural caucus rates Symington 100 percent

ST. LOUIS — The Congressional Rural Caucus has informed 2nd District Rep. Jim Symington, D-St. Louis, that it has given him a 100 per cent rating on votes in Congress related to agricultural and rural concerns.

Ratings of members were made on a scale of 0 to 100 and were based on an analysis of roll call votes on such things as target prices, price supports, loan funds for soil and water conservation programs, and appropriations for rural development and local public works programs. Symington voted for the Rural Caucus position in every instance.

The Rural Caucus was established in Congress in 1972 to actively support programs which will improve the economy and living conditions in rural America and to work for the development of a national program of rural development. The caucus attempts to get a working majority of urban and rural congressmen to support rural and agricultural concerns.

Symington is chairman of the Rural Caucus Committee on Rural Education, Health, and Job Opportunities.

The Ford record vs. the Ford campaign

By Tom Tiede

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — A chap who does research for the Grand Old Party says he has found an H.L. Mencken quote which has application to Jerry Ford's campaign to become the real president. Mencken suggested that losing candidates, and their staffs, be quietly hung as a matter of public sanitation; otherwise, he explained, their grief might have an unsettling effect on the young.

As it applies to J. Ford, the witticism is undoubtedly somewhat early, but perhaps not premature. He is not yet officially a loser. But despite primary victories in Michigan and Maryland, the unelected incumbent remains the weakest standing president since Herbert Hoover, the least likely Republican prospect since Alf Landon, and gloom in the GOP remains thicker than Ron Reagan delegates.

The situation might not be so dismal for the sons of Lincoln were Ford having his present bloody scrap with a formidable opponent. But Reagan? In matters of intellectual combat, the Californian is forever unarmed. The story is that he has been against sex education in schools ever since his own kids were brought by the stork. He is an accomplished gentleman, but his philosophy has the characteristics of topsoil in Nevada, ever so wide and an inch deep.

Still, Reagan has been able to all but mortally wound the President of the United States. And he's done it with clean hands. The result seems, at this stage, to be that although Ford will probably still win the nomination, he will stump for election as a political zombie. Current polls indicate that people prefer any of three Democrats to Ford. Things could of course change by November — one concedes that the polar cap may soon melt also — but as it's said by Glenn Gerstell, president of the GOP's Ripon Society:

"If I were to bet, I'd have to bet on a Democrat."

Undoubtedly we will hear from multiplying numbers of pessimistic Republicans from here to election. And many of them will be trying to fix the blame for the party's predicament. Watergate will be lamented, as Gerstell explains, for having weakened both the spirit and bloodlines of Republicanism. And the official GOP luminaries, such as Charles Percy and Elliott Richardson, will be rapped for not having opposed Ford for the good of the party if not themselves.

But the interim President himself will likely and justifiably receive the most point-blank criticism. Even as a caretaker chief executive he had by dint of the White House mystique an extraordinary opportunity to extend the life of the Republican administration by at least eight years. All he would have had to do, after Nixon, was work hard, bless the poor, watch his language and avoid politics, and his incumbency advantage might very well have carried next autumn.

But he has chosen instead to convince the nation it can't do without him. In this regard he has promised an Illinois audience he would have the Pentagon reconsider the closing of an airbase there that is not scheduled to be closed. He has eaten half of a campaign tamale before discovering it was still in its wrapper. At stop after dreary stop he has reminded spectators of Sen. William McAdoo's 1912 remark about Warren Harding: "His speeches leave the impression of an army of phrases moving over the landscape in search of an idea."

He has unfairly used the power of his un-won office for personal political gain, such as when he invited nine New Hampshire editors into the Oval Office for an exclusive primary-eve interview, and when he dangled an $80 million Veterans Administration hospital before the voters of Maryland. And when things have gone bad for him, he has sunk even lower, attacking his opponent, for example, through use of tax-paid bureaucrats who, a la Nixon's saps, use soiled swords.

And so as the end of the primaries nears, President Ford has convinced many people that the rumors of his leadership are true. When the Hot Line rings, he turns to his cabinet and says: "Henry, it's for you."

What's gone wrong with Ford's campaign is that it began in the first place. When you ask voters to look at the record, they do.

Happy Birthday America

Bank of Sikeston Celebrates The Bicentennial With This Gift For You.
A Commemorative Bicentennial Iron-On.
Just Follow The Instructions Below. Need More Than One? Just Come to Bank of Sikeston and Pick Up Another Free.

200 YEARS BICENTENNIAL

THE BANK WITH The Heart of Gold

Bank of Sikeston
Sikeston, Missouri

INSTRUCTION FOR IRON-ON:

1. For best results use permanent press materials of 50 per cent cotton, 50 per cent polyester. All (100 per cent) cotton materials do not hold color after several washings.
2. To protect your ironing board and items to be ironed from staining, place a cover of plain paper over the board. Notebook or bond typing paper is good. Do not use porous paper, such as paper towels or tissue, as they will allow ink to leak thru.
3. Slip your T-Shirt over the end of the ironing board so that the side you wish to print is directly over the protective paper.
4. Cut decal pattern along the dotted lines and place the design face down on the area you wish to decorate. Pin pattern securely to shirt along the top and bottom dotted lines so it can't slide as you iron. Place another piece of protective paper over the design to protect the iron--do not use heavy brown paper.
5. Set your iron on "cotton" (350 F.) and allow to heat to the proper temperature. Be sure to use a dry iron. When iron is hot, press along the design with firm even pressure for one minute. Be sure to cover the design area. Let T-shirt cool at least one minute before removing paper.

Caution: If you have never used an iron before, have an adult member of your family apply the heat transfer for you to be sure your T-shirt comes out just right.

Note on laundering:
Wash and dry with other permanent press clothes using proper settings and temperatures. Do not use chlorine bleach on any permanent press. Cotton will soften and fade slightly.

Eagleton says Carter did 'as good as expected'

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The leader of Missouri's Democrats says the state's 28 pledged delegates to the presidential candidacy of Jimmy Carter were "as good as could be expected."

U.S. Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton made that comment Wednesday after predictions that Carter would collect at least 40 of the 54 delegates during Missouri congressional district meetings the night before failed to materialize.

"The battle lines were whether Mr. X, Mr. Y or Mrs. Z go to the convention," Eagleton said in a telephone interview from his Washington, D.C. office. "People didn't care under whose tent they wanted to go."

The senator led the 34 party leaders who moved from an uncommitted stance to a position supporting the former Georgia governor's candidacy earlier this month. The 34 said the switch would bring at least 40 of the 54 delegates chosen during Missouri's 10 congressional district meetings Tuesday night into Carter's camp.

And while the 28 were good enough to give Carter 52 per cent of the state's delegate strength, 21 remained uncommitted with the rest being divided among three other candidates.

Missouri will send a 71-member delegation—the largest of the 21 states not holding a primary—to the Democratic National Convention in New York in July. Fifty-four of the delgates were selected Tuesday night, with the remaining 17 to be chose at the state convention June 12.

Before the May 13 endorsement of Carter's candidacy, two-thirds of the delegates selected during township, ward and county meetings were uncommitted, with Carter getting only 17 per cent. The endorsement came after Eagleton met with Carter May 11 in Washington, D.C.

Rural caucus rates Symington 100 percent

ST. LOUIS — The Congressional Rural Caucus has informed 2nd District Rep. Jim Symington, D-St. Louis, that it has given him a 100 per cent rating on votes in Congress related to agricultural and rural concerns.

Ratings of members were made on a scale of 0 to 100 and were based on an analysis of roll call votes on such things as target prices, price supports, loan funds for soil and water conservation programs, and appropriations for rural development and local public works programs. Symington voted for the Rural Caucus position in every instance.

The Rural Caucus was established in Congress in 1972 to actively support programs which will improve the economy and living conditions in rural America and to work for the development of a national program of rural development. The caucus attempts to get a working majority of urban and rural congressmen to support rural and agricultural concerns.

Symington is chairman of the Rural Caucus Committee on Rural Education, Health, and Job Opportunities.

The Ford record vs. the Ford campaign

By Tom Tiede

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — A chap who does research for the Grand Old Party says he has found an H.L. Mencken quote which has application to Jerry Ford's campaign to become the real president. Mencken suggested that losing candidates, and their staffs, be quietly hung as a matter of public sanitation; otherwise, he explained, their grief might have an unsettling effect on the young.

As it applies to J. Ford, the witticism is undoubtedly somewhat early, but perhaps not premature. He is not yet officially a loser. But despite primary victories in Michigan and Maryland, the unelected incumbent remains the weakest standing president since Herbert Hoover, the least likely Republican prospect since Alf Landon, and gloom in the GOP remains thicker than Ron Reagan delegates.

The situation might not be so dismal for the sons of Lincoln were Ford having his present bloody scrap with a formidable opponent. But Reagan? In matters of intellectual combat, the Californian is forever unarmed. The story is that he has been against sex education in schools ever since his own kids were brought by the stork. He is an accomplished gentleman, but his philosophy has the characteristics of topsoil in Nevada, ever so wide and an inch deep.

Still, Reagan has been able to all but mortally wound the President of the United States. And he's done it with clean hands. The result seems, at this stage, to be that although Ford will probably still win the nomination, he will stump for election as a political zombie. Current polls indicate that people prefer any of three Democrats to Ford. Things could of course change by November — one concedes that the polar cap may soon melt also — but as it's said by Glenn Gerstell, president of the GOP's Ripon Society:

"If I were to bet, I'd have to bet on a Democrat."

Undoubtedly we will hear from multiplying numbers of pessimistic Republicans from here to election. And many of them will be trying to fix the blame for the party's predicament. Watergate will be lamented, as Gerstell explains, for having weakened both the spirit and bloodlines of Republicanism. And the official GOP luminaries, such as Charles Percy and Elliott Richardson, will be rapped for not having opposed Ford for the good of the party if not themselves.

But the interim President himself will likely and justifiably receive the most point-blank criticism. Even as a caretaker chief executive he had by dint of the White House mystique an extraordinary opportunity to extend the life of the Republican administration by at least eight years. All he would have had to do, after Nixon, was work hard, bless the poor, watch his language and avoid politics, and his incumbency advantage might very well have carried next autumn.

But he has chosen instead to convince the nation it can't do without him. In this regard he has promised an Illinois audience he would have the Pentagon reconsider the closing of an airbase there that is not scheduled to be closed. He has eaten half of a campaign tamale before discovering it was still in its wrapper. At stop after dreary stop he has reminded spectators of Sen. William McAdoo's 1912 remark about Warren Harding: "His speeches leave the impression of an army of phrases moving over the landscape in search of an idea."

He has unfairly used the power of his un-won office for personal political gain, such as when he invited nine New Hampshire editors into the Oval Office for an exclusive primary-eve interview, and when he dangled an $80 million Veterans Administration hospital before the voters of Maryland. And when things have gone bad for him, he has sunk even lower, attacking his opponent, for example, through use of tax-paid bureaucrats who, a la Nixon's saps, use soiled swords.

And so as the end of the primaries nears, President Ford has convinced many people that the rumors of his leadership are true. When the Hot Line rings, he turns to his cabinet and says: "Henry, it's for you."

What's gone wrong with Ford's campaign is that it began in the first place. When you ask voters to look at the record, they do.

INSTRUCTION FOR IRON-ON:

1. For best results use permanent press materials of 50 per cent cotton, 50 per cent polyester. All (100 per cent) cotton materials do not hold color after several washings.
2. To protect your ironing board and items to be ironed from staining, place a cover of plain paper over the board. Notebook or bond typing paper is good. Do not use porous paper, such as paper towels or tissue, as they will allow ink to leak thru.
3. Slip your T-Shirt over the end of the ironing board so that the side you wish to print is directly over the protective paper.
4. Cut decal pattern along the dotted lines and place the design face down on the area you wish to decorate. Pin pattern securely to shirt along the top and bottom dotted lines so it can't slide as you iron. Place another piece of protective paper over the design to protect the iron--do not use heavy brown paper.
5. Set your iron on "cotton" (350 F.) and allow to heat to the proper temperature. Be sure to use a dry iron. When iron is hot, press along the design with firm even pressure for one minute. Be sure to cover the design area. Let T-shirt cool at least one minute before removing paper.

Caution: If you have never used an iron before, have an adult member of your family apply the heat transfer for you to be sure your T-shirt comes out just right.

Note on laundering:
Wash and dry with other permanent press clothes using proper settings and temperatures. Do not use chlorine bleach on any permanent press. Cotton will soften and fade slightly.
